Hanoi Sees New Threat

BABY BONUS LIMIT HIKED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not act on a white paper proposal that family allowances be eliminated for families earning more than $10,000 a year, Welfare Minister John Munro said today.

He said in a Commons reply to Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) that this proposal in the white paper on income security would result in certain injustices and that the government now is considering alternatives.

He did not say what these alternatives are but added in a reply to Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) that there will have to be some income point where family allowances are cut off.

Major Banks Reduce Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's major banks cut their basic interest rates today following a federal government signal designed to stimulate business activity and employment.

In general, the moves brought the level of interest rates about two per cent lower than they were at the start of 1970 when the government was in the midst of a tight-money period in an effort to control inflation.

The Bank of Canada signalled the latest cut when it announced Tuesday night that the bank rate was being cut to 5¾ per cent from 5¾ per cent, effective today. It was the second reduction in less than two weeks and the lowest for the rate since the autumn of 1967.

The chartered banks reacted by cutting their prime rate on loans to 6½ per cent from seven per cent, effective Monday, March 1. At the start of 1970 the prime rate was 8½ per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal all announced similar cuts.

CONSIDERS CUT

The Toronto Dominion Bank, which earlier cut its rate to 6¾ per cent from seven per cent effective Monday, Feb. 22, was considering a possible further reduction.

General mortgage rates also were expected to drift lower in the next few weeks. The Royal Bank in its announcement today cut one-half of one per cent off mortgage rates, lowering them to 8¾ per cent for National Housing Act mortgages and to 9¼ per cent for conventional mortgages.

The bank rate doesn't affect individuals directly since it is the rate the central bank charges on infrequent loans to the chartered banks.

But it is a signal of federal government policy and reductions indicate efforts to pump more money into the economy —generally referred to as easy money.

The prime rate is the rate the chartered banks charge to their best customers for low-risk loans but is more important since it is the basis on which all interest rates generally are based.

INTEREST CHOPPED

Today's announcements were accompanied in most cases by reductions of one-half per cent in the interest the banks pay on some types of savings accounts.

J. Leonard Walker, president of the Bank of Montreal, said the lower rates should be of major importance in reducing the inflow of short-term funds from abroad.

"This should ease some of the upward pressure that has recently pushed the Canadian dollar almost to par with the United States dollar."

MANITOBA MINISTER RESIGNS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Highways Minister Joe Borowski said today he has offered his resignation to the Manitoba government and left it to the cabinet to decide whether to accept it.

The minister left a continuing cabinet meeting and in a brief comment to reporters indicated he would not apologize for reported remarks about the working habits of Indians and about a disabled war veteran working as a security guard at the legislature building.

"If I apologized I would be pleading guilty to being a racist," said the 37-year-old minister.

Dockyards Reject Offer

Federal government dockyard workers in Halifax and in Esquimalt have rejected a pay offer from the treasury board.

Workers in Halifax voted 83 per cent against and Esquimalt workers were 84.7 per cent against, producing a combined opposition of 95 per cent.

Tom Graham, west coast president of the Federal Government Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, comprised of affiliated unions, said today Esquimalt men were offered an increase of 42 cents an hour compared with 27 cents for Halifax.

SUPPORT EAST

Rejection "means the workers out here have almost unanimously supported the people in the east. We have listened to people in high places talk about the problems of regional disparity. Now we are giving them a chance to do something about it."

He said talks have been marked by "a complete lack of negotiation on the part of the treasury board."

Halifax naval dockyard workers have announced plans for a strike vote next week in an effort to get the same increase as offered the Esquimalt men.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said Tuesday that "under no circumstances" should Halifax dockyard workers get a smaller raise than those at Esquimalt.

East coast union spokesman Bernard Dixon said the Halifax workers "are getting shafted" in the offers, which would give them an hourly base rate of $3.58 or $1 an hour less than Esquimalt.

Maritime Defence Group Threatened by Arms Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — Withdrawal of Nigeria from the eight-nation Commonwealth committee on maritime defence in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans likely will scuttle the committee before it can even meet, informed sources here said today.

Canada is a member of the committee, established at last month's Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore as a delaying tactic on the issue of British arms for South Africa.

The tactic worked for only one month and while Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, was still trying to arrange the committee's first meeting, Britain announced earlier this week it will sell military helicopters to South Africa.

Mr. Smith is in Ottawa for a meeting late today with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. He was to leave immediately after the meeting for London.

Nigeria is one of two African members on the committee. The other is Kenya.

INDIA MAY FOLLOW

India has indicated it is likely to withdraw from the committee following the Nigerian move.

The British decision has made it "very difficult for any of us to continue in the study group or to have anything to do with it," highly placed sources said.

The Indian foreign ministry warned in a statement last Monday that any British decision to sell arms to South Africa before the study group completed its work would have "serious implications for the very existence of the Commonwealth."

The main African opponent at Singapore to British sale of armaments to South Africa was not Nigeria.

The most criticism came from Zambia and Tanzania, which are not members of the committee.

$1,350,000 PAID FOR GIRL'S LOSS

LAURA

NEW YORK (AP) — A Long Island girl who lost her arms after she touched an electrical transformer in May, 1968, will receive $1,350,000 in what her lawyer called the largest such out-of-court settlement in the United States.

The girl, Laura Falconer of Centereach, N.Y., was three years old at the time of the accident. While playing in a lot near her home she touched the transformer, which had been placed there by the Long Island Lighting Co. Her arms were severely burned and subsequently amputated.

The device had been put in the lot to serve a housing development, but the development never was built. The transformer was in a locked steel box, but someone had broken the lock.

Nixon Slaps Curbs On Construction Pay

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon has given management and labor a clear indication of his toughening stand against inflation by imposing wage controls on government - sponsored construction work.

The White House announced Tuesday Nixon suspended indefinitely the Davis-Bacon Act of 1931 which controls wages paid on building jobs financed by Washington. Officials estimate that these amount to about one-third of the $90,000 million in construction projects at present under way in the United States.

Labor's immediate reaction was hostile, and construction industry chiefs said the president's action would be ineffective and inadequate.

But Nixon appeared to have backed away from a direct showdown with either group by ruling out a politically-volatile general freeze on wages and prices throughout the industry.

Instead, he suspended the legislation under which men employed on government construction work are paid at the prevailing local wage rate, which usually means the highest scale for private projects.

Laos Push Alarms N. Viets

Times News Services

SAIGON — While U.S. planes continued the bombing of North Vietnam today, a Hanoi military leader was quoted as saying that recent moves by the United States in Indochina had placed the security of his country in great danger.

The North Vietnam news agency reported that Defence Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap told a Soviet embassy reception in Hanoi Tuesday night that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had launched a large-scale invasion of southern Laos in coordination with Laotian government and Thai forces.

"In massing such a big force just south of the 17th parallel, the U.S. also plots against the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam," he said.

NO LIMIT

Moreover, President Nixon had declared that he would not put any limit on the use of U.S. power, especially air power, in any part of Indochina, Giap noted.

"This is a new very serious step taken by the U.S. imperialists to escalate their war in violation of the sovereignty and neutrality of the kingdom of Laos, to the great danger of the security of the DRVN."

The latest U.S. raids on the North were a follow up to 50 strikes along the Laotian border in North Vietnamese territory during the weekend.

Tuesday night and early today, two F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers fired three air-to-ground missiles southeast of the Ben Karai pass in North Vietnam, near an infiltration route from the North. A third plane attacked radar-controlled anti-aircraft sites in the area.

TAX CHANGE DELAYED . . . BUT ONLY BRIEFLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Government sources say that Finance Minister Edgar Benson's definitive proposals for revision of federal tax law will not be introduced in the Commons before May.

This represents a months' delay from the schedule the government had a few weeks ago. It was then stated the tax-law changes could not be introduced before the end of March, but might come in April or May.

The plan will be introduced in the Commons with a budget speech, triggering a six-day general debate before the tax law amending bill itself is introduced formally.

Teamsters Claim 37 Pacts Signed

The Teamsters Union said this morning it has signed new agreements with 37 companies in the general trucking and warehouse industry in British Columbia.

The agreements contain the struck goods clause which has been the stumbling block between the union and the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for more than 70 companies, most of which have not signed new agreements.

Blair Whitelock, head of the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 31 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said the companies which have signed new agreements handle 40 per cent of the highway freight business.

The legislature, meanwhile, did not debate Tuesday a government notice of motion which would order an end to the strike-lockout which began Friday.

DETAILS LACKING

Labor Minister and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who gave the notice of motion, would give no explanation of why it was not put to the legislature Tuesday.

Carl Anshelm, chief negotiator for the companies, met Peterson Tuesday but would give no details. He said he is disappointed the government has not intervened.

Whitelock said the extent of the new agreements signed with 37 companies would make the legislature's debate "an exercise in nothing because the public is not being inconvenienced."

He said Peterson was "just flying a kite when he said that the public is being inconvenienced by this dispute. The public cannot be inconvenienced unless the dispute goes on for some time."

CROSSED LINES

The struck goods clause allows Teamsters to refuse to operate equipment brought through picket lines by supervisors or others. The union already had a clause allowing union members not to cross picket lines.

During the 1969 oil refineries strike, however, while Teamsters refused to cross picket lines, supervisors took tanker-trucks in and out and turned them over to Teamsters for delivery.

Senator Ed Lawson, head of the Teamsters Union in Canada, said the union doesn't want to be "legal strikebreakers."

In Victoria, two of the three member companies of the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association — Johnston Terminals and Capital Freightways—have closed down but a third, Dowell's

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Belgian authorities today expelled Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the militant Jewish Defence League. They said they did so because he would not guarantee he would not try to speak at the World Conference on Soviet Jews.

FLEEING MEN GET SINKING FEELING

STAFFORD, England (Reuter) — Two men carrying suitcases full of stolen property had a sinking feeling as they raced across a snow-covered lawn.

What they thought was the lawn was an ice-covered swimming pool.

The men whom police helped to dry off Tuesday after they got out of the pool, Barry Halstead, 25, and William Mansfield, 23, each were sentenced to 18 months for burglary in this central England town.

Peter Wilson, 24, who was waiting for them in a getaway car, also got 18 months.

WALLACE ON DOCTOR HASSLE:

Loffmark Must Speak for Himself

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark — not the Social Credit party — must clarify whether he lied to the legislature, Socred backbencher Dr. Scott Wallace said today.

The Oak Bay MLA said in an interview today he was sad to see Premier Bennett had made the Loffmark controversy a party issue Tuesday when he announced the minister has his personal backing.

"The responsibility rests directly on the shoulders of one man to clarify the situation, and not on the party as a whole," Wallace said.

He said he would not say whether he thought Loffmark had lied to the legislature. But if the health minister has lied, as the Liberals have suggested, he has no choice but to resign, Wallace said.

'I still retain the hope that the minister will make a statement. I don't think that any institution can persist in any real way if the honor of any member is left in doubt."

WALLACE
. . . matter of principle

In the house Tuesday Bennett said that in the parliamentary system cabinet ministers are "on the recommendation of the premier."

"I want to say the minister of health services has the complete confidence of the premier of B.C."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said allegations against Loffmark are serious enough to warrant a "committee of privilege" to study the issue.

Macdonald said Bennett's reply is "strictly a partisan answer . . . That's a 38-17 answer and it's not good enough."

The government has 38 seats and the opposition, 17.

Loffmark was accused of filing an untrue statement in the legislature after he took issue with charges that he had threatened to look into the medical qualifications of a Clearwater doctor who was campaigning vigorously for a hospital.

Library Okays 3 Branches

Approval was given Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Public Library board for sites, money allocation and minimum size of three branch libraries to be built with centennial grant money.

The sum of $85,000 will be allocated for an Oak Bay branch, to be built on municipally-owned land on Monterey; $190,000 to buy land and build a library in the Hillside-Shelbourne area; and $100,000 for a library on Saanich's Lambrick Park Estate.

The Oak Bay branch will have a minimum space of 4,200 square feet, the Hillside-Shelbourne one, 7,000 square feet and the Saanich library, 5,000 square feet.

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning said priority should be given to acquiring as much space as possible in the three libraries.

MOTION DEFEATED

A motion by Brian Tobin, chairman of the centennial branch libraries committee, that space be provided in the Saanich library for an environmental centre, was defeated.

Opposing the motion, Victoria Ald. Peter Pollen said it would be "most ill-advised."

Pollen added that Encironment 100, the group which is working for such a centre, was a "very, very good thing." He was a charter member and had supported the group financially.

LOTS OF SPIRIT

"But I'm getting sick and tired of do-good organizations, who although they have lots of spirit, end up asking the community to support their projects."

Ald. Gunning, after noting that an environment information centre was closely allied to library services, said she was against "handing over some of the 5,000 square feet to an outside agency."

Board chairman, Col. A. O. Hood, observed: "Before we become involved with Environment 100 we should know how their proposal for Victoria will fit in with their project in North Vancouver that is quite a large one and now functioning."

In other business:

● Acting chief librarian Mrs. Ann O'Brien said 18 persons, who will be graduating from the University of British Columbia's library school, had been interviewed.

"Not one of them is doing field work with this library," she added.

She said that the library would have about eight vacancies, not all of which would be filled with graduate librarians.

● An interim adjustment of bookmobile service was approved, made necessary by the retirement of a part-time driver. Two school stops will be rescheduled and three Saturday routes will be switched to other days. A complete survey of bookmobile service will be carried out.

● The board agreed to pay $200 as the library's share of $1,600 needed for the B.C. Centennial Citizens' Conference on Libraries.

● The board decided to hold a joint reception with the library staff for the new director of library services, Donald Miller of London, Ont., who is due to arrive here in mid-March.

Boating Honors Griffiths

Former Victorian Garth Griffiths, now manager of B.C. Hydro's distribution division in Vancouver, has been presented with the Award of Merit for outstanding service to boating by the Canadian Boating Federation.

The award is given annually to the Canadian who has had the greatest influence on the improvement of pleasure boating during that year. Griffiths was chosen by a selection committee that evaluated submissions and evidence from all parts of Canada.

During his years in Victoria, Griffiths was an active member of the Victoria Power Squadron, joining the squadron in its infancy and instructing hundreds in pilotage and safe boat handling.

His book Boating in Canada now has nation-wide influence. It is used as the official textbook for all Canadian power squadrons. There are about 115 squadrons across the country and membership is now close to 10,000.

Griffiths' book replaces the American textbook, Chapman's Piloting and Small Boat Handling, as the squadron's official manual.

Transferred to Vancouver in 1962, Griffiths still takes part in some of the local squadron's functions.

PTA Urges Tenure Changes

A five-year probationary period for all neophyte teachers was recommended today by the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation.

In a brief to the legislative education committee, the federation also said dismissal of incompetent teachers should be made "realistically feasible."

The federation said the one-year probation should be retained for school districts hiring a teacher with at least five years' experience.

The "open-ended appointment" of school principals should be replaced by three-year employment contracts, the federation said.

The group also wants principals to be required to prepare evaluation reports on "marginally competent staff members" including all those who have been the subject of complaints in a given year.

The federation said it is opposed to the principles of teacher tenure as currently established but it recognizes the danger to staff morale if all teacher tenure safeguards were abandoned.

PGE Profit Increases

The government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway Co. reports a 1970 net profit of $896,923 after provision for interest and depreciation. This compares with a net profit of $746,131 in 1969.

Gross revenues totalled $33.7 million, up from $30.47 million in 1969, and capital expenditures totalled $41.9 million including $27.76 million for rail extensions under way from Fort St. John to Fort Nelson and from Fort St. James to Dease Lake.

In 1970 the company achieved the highest volume of carloadings, revenues and tonnages in its 58-year history.

Juvenile Judge To Hold Parents Responsible

NANAIMO (CP) — Juvenile court Judge William Philpott says he is going to take a strict stand on juvenile delinquency by holding the parents of juveniles responsible if their children do not adhere to probation terms.

He made the comment Tuesday after sentencing 15- and 16-year-old boys on charges of breaking and entering.

The judge said parents who fail to maintain strict custody of their children will be charged with contributing to juvenile delinquency.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ida M. Gaddy, about 70, died Tuesday when fire swept the old apartment she lived in over a lamp shade factory.

Public Meet Postponed

A meeting to hear the public's view on what a community centre at Cedar Hill Park in Saanich should contain has been postponed one week, it was announced today.

The meeting has been rescheduled for Thursday, March 4, at 7:30 p.m. in Doncaster Elementary, one week later than previously arranged, because a number of council members are going to the mainland for a municipal seminar.

Ald. Alan Newberry, chairman of the council-citizens Cedar Hill Recreation Study Committee, said he hopes there will be "an outpouring" of the public's views on what the centre should contain.

He hoped that a decision would be made "in the next 60 days at the maximum" so the committee could get down to details.

The 1967 recreation referendum provided $260,000 for the community centre, but the specific use of the centre was not stated.

OUTSHINES CIRCUS ACT

BIRMINGHAM, England (UPI) — Bobby Yeomans, 3, tried to duplicate on his parents bed the circus trampoline act he saw on television — except he tried too hard.

The youngster sailed through the bedroom window, landed on the roof and then fell 15 feet to the ground. He was treated at a hospital for head injuries and later reported in good condition.

Shadow Mischief

POSTAL UNION CHIEF READY TO NEGOTIATE

LONDON (UPI) — The head of Britain's striking postal workers union said today he was ready to resume negotiations with the state-run post office in talks chaired by Employment Minister Robert Carr.

But Tom Jackson said he was not particularly optimistic of ending the strike which entered its sixth week today and which the post office says has cost the government 17 million pounds (40.8 million dollars).

FILE UIC CLAIMS

Bob Milliken, local business agent for the Teamsters Union Local 31, said employees at Johnston and Capital will apply for unemployment insurance claiming they were laid off, not locked out. Employees at Johnston were told not to bother reporting Monday and manager C. H. Ruttan said earlier lockout notice had not been posted.

Milliken also said two Victoria companies, Grassick Transport and Happy Valley Freight, have signed new agreements including the struck goods clause. He said earlier two lumber haulers, not identified by name, had done the same.

A small demonstration, meanwhile, was expected to be held at the Legislative Building this afternoon with a bus load of truck drivers coming from Vancouver to protest the threat of use of the Mediation Commission Act (Bill 33) to end the strike-lockout.

Communist troops staged a rocket attack today on Quang Tri, the major staging and supply base for the South Vietnamese strike into Laos. The U.S. Command also reported the loss of three more American helicopters in Laos and the deaths of 11 crewmen, heaviest one-day toll of the Loatian operation.

The South Vietnamese incursion into Laos to cut the Ho Chi Minh supply trails remained stalled 16 to 17 miles inside the border and front dispatches reported heavy rocket attacks had resumed on an isolated ARVN paratroop unit 15 miles inside Laos.

ATTACKS RESUME

The U.S. Command so far has reported the loss of 29 helicopters with 40 Americans killed, 26 wounded and 15 missing since the incursion into Laos began Feb. 8. Correspondents in forward posts put the helicopter loss at 72 or more over Laos and South Vietnam. The South Vietnamese admit losing four more.

Officially, despite heavy losses, the South Vietnamese incursion has been described as a "success" since it disrupted Communist supply lines. Today, the U.S. Command said Ameerican air strikes had killed more than 500 North Vietnamese and destroyed 800 tons of ammunition plus vast quantities of other supplies.

Churchill Intimate Dies

SALISBURY, England (AP) — Viscount Stuart of Findhorn, one of Sir Winston Churchill's most trusted colleagues during the Second World War, died in Salisbury infirmary after a fall. He was 74.

Stuart, a friend of the Royal Family and a brilliant wit, was parliamentary chief whip in the wartime government. Churchill called him an intimate adviser and friend during some of Britain's darkest days.

He was Conservative member of Parliament for the Scottish division of Moray and Nairn from 1923 to 1959, when he was created a viscount. His last government post was secretary of state for Scotland in Churchill's peacetime administration.

Hydro May Mark Inlet Line

B.C. Hydro engineers will study a proposal to mark their wires over the Gorge Road Bridge, blamed in the mid-air collision deaths of two swans this month.

The swans nest in Portage Inlet and swim downstream during the day. They must swim directly into the sun during homeward flights when the tide is low, and have difficulty seeing the wires.

A Hydro spokesman said a story in the Times last Friday had prompted a number of suggestions, including several from former U.K. residents who suggested the British method be adopted. This consists of stringing two-inch corks on the wire at regular intervals.

Hydro has ruled out the possibility of hanging streamers on the line, because of the danger of short circuits in wind and rain storms.

Hydro will announce a decision on the cork proposal in a few days.

"Birds flying into power lines constitute a continuing problem," the spokesman said. "We wouldn't cork all our lines in the province, but it is being considered at the bridge because of the swans."

The huge white birds are the commonest type found on southern Vancouver Island, and weigh 30 pounds fully grown.

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly half of City College's 20,000 students use marijuana and more than eight per cent use heroin, but use of LSD and other "hard hallucinogens" is dropping off, a study commission reported.

Queenswood Lot Size Hike?

Saanich municipal planning committee recommended Tuesday night that the subdivision minimum in the Queenswood district be made one acre.

Committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring said the recommendation, if approved at next Monday's council meeting, would replace a bylaw passed several years ago preventing further subdivision.

He said the residents had asked for protection against future subdivision, but Saanich had been advised that it is beyond its power to state that no more subdivision shall occur.

He said that Saanich and Queenswood residents are in the position that if someone applied for half-acre lots—the area comes in a half-acre zone—and was refused, he could go to court and if the court upheld him Saanich would have to allow the subdivision.

The committee was told there is a potential of 100 lots in half-acre sizes. It recommended the existing bylaw preventing future subdivision be repealed and amend the subdivision bylaw to set the minimum at one acre in Queenswood.

"This is good for the Queenswood people because it gets rid of something hanging over their head and substitutes something more acceptable," Waring said.

Esquimalt Ships In Exercise

The Esquimalt-based naval vessels HMCS St. Croix, HMCS Yukon HMCS Qu'Appelle, HMCS Provider and HMCS Rainbow are taking part in a major naval exercise involving 20,000 men, which began Tuesday off the California coast.

Besides the five Canadian shps, the 10-day exercise will involve 42 American naval vessels, 29 air squadrons and three air detachments.

Senior officer in charge is Vice-Admiral Ray Peet, USN, commander of the First Fleet, and senior Canadian officer is Capt. M. A. Martin, commander of the 2nd Escort Squadron.

The Esquimalt destroyer-escorts will take part in shore bombardment and anti-submarine work, the Rainbow will join American submarines in providing underwater targets for the surface and air sub-hunters, and the Provider will provide ship replenishment at sea.

Rainbow is scheduled to arrive back in Esquimalt March 19 and the other four ships, March 11.

Topless Girl in Blushing Rescue

HONOLULU (UPI — The crew of a Japanese fishing boat hauled in an unusual catch—a well-built 5-8 brunette, topless with a gold bikini bottom.

But shapely Lois Maertz said that her rescue after spending four hours in the ocean off Waikiki Beach Monday, saved her life.

After lunch at a Waikiki hote, Miss Maertz, a cocktail waitress, decided to paddle the kayak back to her apartment near Diamond Head, but was caught in a strong seaward current. After two hours, the boat capsized.

She held onto the floating craft for another hour until a wave broke the hold of her by-then bruised arms. Then she swam and yelled for help.

Sometime during the ordeal, her bikini top came off and floated away.

"Then, just by chance, I saw this ship coming right toward me," she said. "I began waving and screaming and they saw me."

The Japanese fishing vessel picked her up and brought her to shore.

"She very nearly had it," said a friend she left on shore, "but she sure made the day complete for the fishing boat crew."

Said Miss Maertz: "I usually go skin diving, but I don't think I'll go in the water for a while. I swallowed too much of it."

SOMEWHAT DUBIOUS about research in the interests of science is Pinker, canis familiaris. Pinker, however, did his part for owner Linda Fyfe, 863 Craigflower, in the science fair display at Lampson Elementary Tuesday night. Linda titled her Grade 7 project "Changes in My Dog" and measured Pinker's growth over several months.

Bennett Word 'Fraud' Charges Opposition

By PETER McNELLY

The New Democrats renewed their attack on the government's land development policy Tuesday as Opposition Leader Dave Barrett charged that Premier Bennett made fraudulent public statements in 1968.

Referring to Bennett's promise of public bidding for lands along B.C. highways and a land acquisition policy, Barrett said:

"You gave your solemn word you would institute a new highways policy and that word was a fraud. It was a fraud. Are you now ready to say to the people of British Columbia that you didn't mean it? Were you just guessing then, or did you mean it? Does your word mean anything any more?"

Bennett did not answer Barrett's charge.

REPETITIVE

Repeated NDP efforts to get a statement from Bennett ended during the evening sitting when supply committee chairman Herb Bruch ordered Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) to sit down and stop discussing the issue on the grounds he was being repetitive.

His ruling was challenged by the opposition and upheld by the government majority.

Barrett opened the afternoon sitting with a description of his earlier telephone conversation with Tom Miard, deputy minister of highways, in which he said Miard couldn't recall whether Bennett's 1968 policy instructions had reached him.

He said he found it "unusual" that a major policy announcement hadn't found its way into written form.

TRIED FOR ANSWER

Later, Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) tried to get Bennett to answer questions on the issue and ended up shouting that even if the issue doesn't "get through" to the premier, "it will get through to the people."

Williams, who has led the attack with charges about land speculation deals involving Bennett's sons, said earlier the government could get the equivalent revenue of between 6 and 8 cents a gallon if it leased public land along B.C. highways.

This practice has proved profitable in Pennsylvania, he said.

A similar policy for British Columbia involving only 10 per cent of developed land along highways would bring revenues of $16 million a year, he said.

Williams renewed this demand that government files in the lands and highways departments be opened to him.

SEEK FILES

"Will the files on the Kamloops Bypass be made available, the file on Springhill Holdings Ltd., will the file on Gallately Road be made available?"

He said it is clear files on the "favored few" remain closed to MLAs.

"Oh, sit down," shouted Minister Without Portfolio Pat Jordan. "Why don't you pay your taxes on your house?"

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) quoted from a 1968 speech by Bennett when he was a Conservative member of the Coalition government.

In the speech, Bennett attacked the government's budget proposal to impose a 3-per-cent sales tax.

Bennett rose to say he was glad to see the opposition quoting his speeches because they did it so much.

Barrett stood up and said he was quoting the premier from only two years ago and demanded an answer.

'NOBODY LISTENS'

"Oh, nobody listens to you any more," Bennett said.

"Answer the question. Is your word the law? How good is your word?" Barrett said.

Bennett said nothing all afternoon concerning his statements from 1968 when he held the highways portfolio briefly.

Eileen Dailly (NDP—Burnaby-North) said his refusal to answer "leaves us no alternative but to assume that the premier's statement has not been carried out."

FREE TRADE WITH U.S. URGED

Canada should push for a North American Common Market, Premier Bennett said Tuesday.

"I have made recommendations that we should make overtures to the United States on a formula basis," Bennett told the legislature.

He said Canadian manufacturers need larger markets, and said he does not share the fear of Americans which some people show.

Bennett's formula would allow full free trade provision after 10 years. This would be achieved by 10 per cent yearly reductions in tariffs.

The premier said Canadian industries would develop on a sounder baisis with larger markets.

"I believe that if we had a Common Market we can have a prosperity with the Americans and a higher standard of living than we have ever had."

He made his remarks in response to Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) who said he supported free trade but realized it would take some years to achieve.

Bennett has urged Ottawa at previous federal-provincial conferences to begin negotiations for a North American Common Market.

Glenlyon School Open House Set

It's open house at Glenlyon School for Boys tonight.

The attraction is the school's annual science fair featuring displays ranging from the study of pollution to the study of space travel.

The fair represents the work of 85 students in grades 7, 8, 9 and 10. Each entered an exhibit.

The fair is open between 7 and 9 p.m., one night only.

EXTEND HOME GRANTS, SOCRED URGES BENNETT

A Social Credit MLA Tuesday asked Premier Bennett to consider extending the $2,500 second mortgage and $500 grant for purchase of older homes.

Howard McDiarmid (SC — Alberni) said the special aid, which began last year and is scheduled to expire March 31, is "a fantastic boon" for lower income families.

"The way to home ownership may be impaired for many persons in the lower income spectrum," McDiarmid said, suggesting the special program's "very success ... may have led to its demise."

The special aid to purchase older homes is in addition to the $5,000 second mortgage or $1,000 grant available to purchasers of new homes. The new home aid is a continuing program.

Premier Bennett indicated in interjections to a similar request from Leo Nimsick (NDP — Kootenay) that the government wants to concentrate on new home assistance "to create jobs."

Nimsick replied that the new home aid wouldn't do the job unless people moving out of older homes are able to find others to buy them, which is exactly what the older home assistance has encouraged, he said.

When Facts Defeat Ideals

IT TOOK THE PROBLEMS CREated by a million black immigrants during less than a generation to bring Britain to the point of a blanket removal of entry advantages which citizens of Commonwealth countries traditionally have enjoyed. The new proposed immigration bill, while couched in general terms, obviously is aimed at prospective immigrants from Commonwealth lands of predominantly colored populations.

The ideal of freely granted admittance for citizens of all Commonwealth countries regardless of race or color could not survive the practical problems that arose when black-skinned immigrants by the thousands began to pour into Britain to seek their fortunes. The approximately one million now in Britain, while arithmetically insignificant among the 55 million white inhabitants, have created unforeseen crises.

The fire-brand Conservative, Mr. Enoch Powell, has openly urged that the existing black residents be returned to their countries of origin. A contrived device respecting possession of passports has denied access to Britain for thousands of Indians being forced out of South Africa. Now the only slightly veiled racial discrimination of the new bill adds another impediment to increase of the non-white population in Britain.

While contravening the ideal of free entry without discrimination the bill has grim logic on its side. The inescapable fact is that the rapid influx of large numbers of permanent black residents has created problems in Britain. Black residents have tended to concentrate in small areas, thus accentuating the fact of their presence. The newcomers have sought work, often flooding particular types of employment with Negro competition which has raised the opposition of white residents.

In a country traditionally free of color prejudice—as thousands of black students and others who lived in Britain in the past could attest—a new and unfortunate discrimination quickly arose. Blacks took jobs, it was claimed; they depreciated housing property; they clung to cultural or social customs offensive to Britons. These were the accusations, born largely of economic competition but quickly becoming a strong political issue.

Ideals have bowed to practicalities. This will be deplored—perhaps most loudly by countries which have no color problem by reason of having no colored persons. It should not be construed as innate prejudice in the British government, but rather as a recognition that human beings being as they are, the rapid infusion of a sizable Negro element into a white population unfortunately can build up antipathies, injustices and problems.

It is a different problem from that in the United States, where the black population is descended from forebears brought forcibly to the country generations ago. It is different, too, from the situation in Rhodesia or South Africa, where the conflict arises between whites who entered the country generations ago and imposed their presence and their domination on a black population. The British action is deplorable, but understandable and perhaps inevitable. We live in an imperfect world.

Catching Up in Regina

IN REGINA THE LIBERAL GOVernment of Premier Ross Thatcher presented an outline of legislative things to come at the opening of the Saskatchewan Legislature last week. The program represents a moderate approach to problems which arise in other provinces as well and its interest derives from its reflection of an economic base which is becoming increasingly diversified and healthy. Wheat is no longer the only significant factor in Saskatchewan's economy.

There will be: an act to prevent pollution from livestock feeding operations, a legislative committee to review current liquor laws, workmen's compensation on a voluntary basis for farmers and farm workers, legislation to protect consumers from unsolicited goods and credit cards, large sums of money expended on new projects to alleviate unemployment, legislation to give employees absolute priority in respect to wages over all other claims and general creditors in cases where a company has defaulted, an increase in the minimum wage.

It is not a striking program for its proposals are unexciting and unoriginal. But in "bread-and-butter" issues, of which Premier Thatcher is always talking, a lack of excitement could indicate solid progress on matters which are so vital that quiet competence is the criterion of political success.

Their Job Is to Keep the Peace

THE DEPLORABLE BEHAVIOR of persons involved in the junior hockey spectators' brawl at the Memorial Arena on February 6 has prompted the city police commission to suggest payment by private agencies for police supervision of events there. This is a proposal that requires further explanation.

Part of the answer lies in the frequency of such occurrences. Police are normally on call for an emergency — as they were on February 6 — and an emergency is not supposed to happen regularly. If violent rowdiness were to become a regular feature of junior hockey games here, then the Arena management could reasonably be expected to provide either some means of avoiding the uproar or alternatively some means of quelling it. This would leave the police free to carry out their proper work throughout the city.

The commission moves onto very questionable ground when it suggests that members of the peace-keeping force be rented out at an additional charge to do their job.

Long Overdue

THE EXPLANATORY NOTE accompanying the recently introduced Bill C-220, an act to amend the Criminal Code regarding attempted suicide, says almost all that needs to be said to justify the change.

"The purpose of this Bill," the note reads, "is to repeal section 213 of the Criminal Code (which says that everyone who attempts to commit suicide is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction). The anachronism of Section 213 warrants total removal of suicide or attempted suicide as a criminal offence. Provincial authorities dealing in health and welfare will, by the repeal of this section, be freer to treat the problem of suicide in a humane manner."

That covers the situation, with perhaps a reminder that, under existing legislation, it is only failure to complete the act that leaves the individual in a position to suffer any punishment that could be applied on summary conviction.

"... stop complaining ... we're after big fish, aren't we ...?"

Preservation

New York Times

It has taken five years of negotiation between the city and the trustees of Sailors' Snug Harbor to save six landmark structures on the Staten Island waterfront from that fate worse than death known as modernization.

As the new facilities for the seamen's home were planned, the old ones would have suffered death by bulldozer. Instead, this unusually fine group of historic Greek Revival buildings on thirteen acres of superb harbor land will be bought by the city as headquarters for the Staten Island Museum; funds already allocated to that institution will be used — a solution of stunning logic and notable municipal gain.

Credit must go to the Landmarks Preservation Commission and the sophisticated tenacity of its chairman, Harmon Goldstone. Mr. Goldstone believes that New Yorkers are people who respect their past and treasure its monuments, who understand that a great city has history and style. At a time when a city hardly has humanity, that takes a lot of faith, but he may be right. Increasingly, New Yorkers are demonstrating that they do know and care.

Certainly the climate in the city has changed. The trustees of Sailors' Snug Harbor challenged the law's constitutionality in a suit to overturn the landmark designation. In a decision of major importance, the law was upheld. And now the city has found a way to keep the buildings.

The past has a future, even if it is a fight every step of the way.

HERCULE POIROT ON THE JOB

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Baffling Plots to Keep Trudeau Racked in Office

WHEN Hercule Poirot, the famous European detective, knocked softly on my door last night and slipped in hurriedly, glancing back to make sure he was not followed, I could see at once that he was under some terrible strain. As you may recall, he had visited Canada on a secret mission last year, at Prime Minister Trudeau's request, to investigate the alarming strategy of the Conservative opposition, but that task, M. Poirot said, had been a small matter, a bagatelle. Now something much more serious was afoot, an affair of grave international danger. In fact, he told me in strict confidence, he came as the agent of the mysterious chief of the French Bureau of Insecurity, Armand Cul de Sac, whose name made me tremble.

Hutchison

"Alors," said M. Poirot, after he had carefully drawn the blinds, "it is, of course, the Canadian constitution, what else? Do you suppose, mon ami, that the recent conference at Ottawa and the new constitutional formula were overlooked in Paris? Do you take us for fools?

"Mais non, we immediately saw that a plot had been hatched. Canada was executing some vast manoeuvre certain to shake the comity of nations. But what? It is baffling.

"Regardez! The eleven governments of Canada meet. They agree to bring the constitution home from London and rewrite it. These plans look harmless enough on the surface; but then the sinister machination, the coup de main! Mais oui, the power of veto is given to so many provinces, regions and local interests that obviously there can be no amendment, no new constitution, nothing!

"Most foreigners, the naive British and Americans for instance, may suppose that this is all merely a disagreement, a clash of politics, a temporary delay, but Hercule Poirot is not deceived. He knows the Canadian mind, its subtlety disguised by that familiar air of innocence, that old myth so convincing, so diabolic. Machiavelli, I tell you, wouldn't last a week in Ottawa.

Diabolic

"What is the purpose of the latest game? What are the Canadians up to? I put that question to my little grey cells and suddenly I find the answer. Ah, but it is even more subtle and diabolic than I had guessed. It is not a government manoeuvre after all. It is not the work of Pierre Trudeau. It is a monstrous intrigue of the opposition. It is the cunning design of Robert Stanfield and David Lewis. By a constitutional debate they are masking a greater conspiracy.

"As you know, the prime minister had long been terrified by M. Stanfield and engaged me to study his political methods. I reported privately that the opposition leader was fatally undermining the government by refusing to adopt any policy of his own and appearing to stand on both sides of every issue while M. Trudeau necessarily antagnoized everyone. Alas, even Hercule Poirot was wrong.

"I understand it all now and it is a masterpiece of deception. As I watch Parliament from the gallery I see in a flash that M. Stanfield does not intend to win the next election. He is too smart for that. He observes the agony of the prime minister and has no wish to inherit it.

"So all the bits and pieces of Conservative strategy fall into place. The marvellous talent of ambiguity, the genius of solemn obfuscation, the demands for economy and increased expenditure, for lower taxes and more revenue, for inflation and deflation at the same time — all this, with touches of comic relief from George Hees and undertones of tragedy from John Diefenbaker, this is no accident. It is the final logic, the grand design to keep the Conservative party out of office, and it succeeds brilliantly.

"Having solved that problem, I report to the prime minister and he, naturally, is appalled. The poor man realizes that he has no chance of escaping the cruel burdens of power. All his plans for retirement, all his hopes for release, are shattered. After all he has done to affront the voters, there is no way out.

"I leave him heart-broken and in tears but I have no time for sympathy when another problem remains and I must solve it, too. So I concentrate the grey cells on M. Lewis. For obviously he is not what he seems, either.

Too Simple

"In the beginning I suspect that as the prospective NDP leader in Ottawa, with his son leading in Ontario, he intends to establish a dynasty, supported, perhaps, by the ardent monarchists of Paris. As a monarchist myself, I find that theory attractive, but it is too simple, a mere distraction, a clever ruse within the family. Non, like the Conservatives, Lewis pere and Lewis fils, the dedicated socialists, have larger plans and at midnight I awake with a start to understand everything.

"Of a verity it is all quite plain if you consider it dispassionately. The NDP desires a socialist state in Canada. Very well, it need only let things go on as they are going now, without taking any risks or responsibility itself. After a few years at most the nation will be totally socialized, the Regina Manifesto enforced in every detail, the economy completely controlled by the government. M. Lewis has merely to wait a little and meanwhile attack M. Trudeau whenever government control goes wrong in the heavy water of Nova Scotia or the latest fiasco in Manitoba.

Just Bait

"Oh, to be sure, M. Lewis must pretend that he is discouraged by this rapid progress toward the perfect society. He must stretch his credibility out of joint by arguing that the government has engineered a business depression for reasons of sheer masochism. This, however, is just bait for the groundlings, a gaudy charade. The NDP has no thought of winning office, no wish for power when the government will build the desired system and take all the blame for its failures.

"That much has become clear but I still worry. Beneath the sub-plots of the opposition there remains the master-plot of constitutional reform, the unanimous decision by all governments to write a new constitution and the superbly complex arrangements to keep the old one unchanged, for purposes sinister and unknown. Behind an artless face the ruthless Canadian mind is impenetrable. As never before, Hercule Poirot, himself, is baffled."

Correspondence From Our Readers

Basic Subjects

I cannot see that we are getting very far with education. It seems to me that the most important items are being forgotten, or are getting only passing attention. To my mind the most important items in education are English language, English grammar, Canadian history and mathematics. At least the first two of those subjects are badly neglected, badly taught. Pupils are being educated in ten or more subjects with which the majority will never come in contact. Whereas they should be getting a really solid foundation in the subjects mentioned above instead of the many other subjects which they are obliged to study. The same rule applies here as it does in everything on which we must build: without a solid foundation our efforts are in vain. — Illy Yilly Three.

Reached Bottom

After reading the article from Time Magazine which appeared in your newspaper "the making of a hero," on the subject of Lieut. William Calley, I believe I have reached the bottom and it is incredible to me that a so-called civilized people, like the Americans, would make a hero of a man who deliberately gunned down 102 men, women and children at My Lai. It just shows the depths to which we have come in human relationship. I would hang my head in shame if I were an American. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar.

Testing Teachers

Recently, the B.C. School Trustees organization has suggested that the period of probation for newly appointed teachers be two years. That is, no doubt, better than the present one year. However, it would be still better if this provision were dropped altogether and an accurate method of rating worked out and used in dealing with the competence of teachers.

Under the present system, some inspecting official spends a half day watching a teacher's work and rates the teacher on some vague basis. One superintendent stated that he could tell in a very few minutes, from a teacher's work, whether the teacher was good or poor. He was fooling only one person. There is plenty of experimental evidence to show that such a basis for rating is very unreliable, whether in elementary or secondary school or in university.

Teaching efficiency should be measured by testing the pupils' performance with due regard for the pupils' ability. Most of such tests might well be administered by the principals.

With such duties in testing, it is surely obvious that the principal should not be in the same organization as the teachers. — Charles B. Willis, M.A., D.Paed., 1163 Oscar.

Transit Background

The editorial regarding transit in last Saturday's "Times" contains several statements that are not in accordance with the facts. Specifically, the inference that the transit system, like Topsy, "just grew" is incorrect, as is the suggestion that B.C. Electric replaced street cars with diesel buses because it wanted to sell the electricity elsewhere.

In 1946, Victoria and the adjoining municipalities called for bids to provide a unified transportation system to replace the fragmented service then being provided by three transit companies.

B.C. Electric hired Norman D. Wilson of Toronto, at that time considered to be Canada's leading transit consultant, to analyze the situation. As a result of Wilson's recommendations, B.C. Electric offered to provide Greater Victoria with an electric trolley coach system supplemented by gasoline-powered feeder buses. The company even went so far as to bring in a trolley coach from Seattle which it operated over a special demonstration loop of Douglas, Queens, Quadra and Pandora Avenue.

This plan was shelved when the intermunicipal transportation committee insisted on greater route coverage than could be provided economically by the trolley coach system with its expensive overhead wiring.

A proposal for all motor bus system was then submitted jointly by B.C. Electric and Vancouver Island Coach Lines. This proposal was defeated at the polls in December 1946.

After further lengthy negotiations, a plan developed by the two transit companies in co-operation with the intermunicipal transportation committee was approved by the voters in June 1947. The new system was in full operation by July 1948 and all buses were gasoline-powered at that date.

In 1950 B.C. Electric took over the V.I. Coach Lines part of the system and in 1957 the first diesel buses were purchased.

When B.C. Hydro took over the system in 1962 the change-over to diesels was accelerated because this type of bus had proved to be more economical to operate and maintain.

I have no quarrel with the statement that the system "must be drastically altered and reconstructed to meet the needs of today." The operation has been modified and changed from time to time but basically it is the same as when designed 25 years ago.

My main purpose in writing is to set the record straight and to point out that the municipalities did in fact play an important part in determining the type of transit system the area has today. — H. R. Halls, Manager, Victoria Transportation, B.C. Hydro.

Looking Back

From the Times of Feb. 24, 1911:

In the House today Premier McBride made a statement of the government's intentions in regard to the civic situation in Victoria. These are precisely as foreshadowed in the Times on Wednesday — the old council to act as a commission for the carrying on of routine work, and the revision of the voters' list by an amendment body preparatory to a new election.

In order that business might be carried on there would be necessary a bill of an extraordinary character.

Protests May Fail, But Silence Would Be Worse

By JACQUES MADAULE
Le Monde

Friends of mine have been very shocked when, in a moment of discouragement, I have told them that the petitions we sign and the demonstrations we stage against this or that injustice, against a death sentence, for example, are totally useless and probably do not have any effect upon the outcome. After all, there were demonstrations galore for Sacco and Vanzetti, and the Rosenbergs, and Julian Grimau — and they changed nothing.

There were slightly happier endings to the Burgos and Leningrad trials, inasmuch as no one was hanged, but all the demonstrators and petitioners may not have influenced the issue.

What makes me think so is that in Yaounde and Conakry, very soon afterwards, the public killings went on and no one batted an eyelid.

Neither does a week go by without bringing more ghastly evidence of torture in Brazil, year in, year out, and for how many years?

Perhaps we ought to throw up our hands in despair and call the whole thing off, since they are always the same people making the same useless fuss.

Governments could perfectly well forecast, with all their computers, the world's precise reaction to this or that particular misdeed.

The only astonishing thing is that, despite all their marvellous machines, they persist in acting irrationally, putting their political opponents to death and systematically torturing political prisoners.

Of course, one could retort that they are counting on the effects of terror and that unhappily this is not a completely irrational premise.

★ ★ ★

My answer would be that for all Brazil's Gestapo tactics the regime's opponents still manage to pull off a spectacular kidnapping from time to time, and the police can no more find the missing diplomat than the opposition can stop torture. The denouement comes with the inevitable exchange of the hostage against a score or two of prisoners, a scene out of a familiar ballet.

It adds up to this: we hear about all kinds of the world's wrongs, we protest and demonstrate indefatigably, and we ignore the very patchy results we tend to obtain.

Protests and demonstrations do not seem to lessen the sum of suffering, of the universal bane of mankind, as Peguy's Joan of Arc said, particularly since we cannot protest or demonstrate against everything.

You can spend days and nights signing protests, you can always be up at the front of the demonstrations, even so there will always be someone to ask why you failed to protest against this abomination or demonstrate against that horror, and what principles determined your choice of good causes.

If you answer, "public opinion," you will be reminded how dextrously all sides manipulate it.

All of which is almost unanswerable — short of saying that there is a lot of wrong with the world, that no one person can hope to put it all right, but that it is still necessary, even vital, to keep fighting, and break down the conspiracy of silence that so many find so convenient.

Should the day ever come when not a voice is raised because it seems there is no point in doing so, then the condemned and tortured will suffer and die in abominable loneliness.

The real reason why we petition and demonstrate is to show them there are others in the world outside who have not forgotten them. It is to give them the feeling of a human presence, even if it is invisible.

★ ★ ★

I believe that in so doing we keep up the morale of those for whom we cannot do anything more.

There are too many of them, in too many parts of the world, and the vision of so much horror everywhere makes even the most stout hearted lose hope — not to mention the huge, indifferent herd interested only in their personal affairs, people more injured than ourselves, people who have always known that protesting does not help and that injustice has always had its way since the world began.

Heaven preserve us from such niggardly common sense! One day, the sooner the better, we should perhaps tackle the root causes, rather than the periodic symptoms, of the evil which men keep doing to each other — as if disease and injury, death and natural disasters were not enough.

What makes us take out our personal frustrations on our fellow beings as if they were to blame for them?

One might think the pain we cause them compensates for the pain we feel ourselves. It is always dangerous to give one man power over another, in case he takes advantage of it. It is the principle of tyranny.

So let us give credit to those who are sincerely trying to lessen the sum of evil in the world, even if they feel a twinge of flattered vanity at seeing their names in print, or buy an easy conscience too cheaply.

Only, let us also hope that they do not remain content with merely demonstrating.

Let them think hard, without prejudice, about the real causes of all this human wretchedness.

In that case their devotion will certainly not have been totally useless.

Do We Want Them To Be Nice Guys?

By DOUGLAS FISHER

TRUDEAU

KING

OTTAWA — Is a man who is mean and nasty — as a reference might say: Of doubtful character — a bad choice, a menace as political leader?

The question in one form or another is creeping forward. It is likely to become more and more topical. It could become the key argument, excessive and bitter, during the federal election campaign.

One can sense the politicians and the parties are shaping and pointing toward June, 1972. Rather quickly, it is clear that the prelude will feature the Prime Minister.

This would not have been a surprising projection, even a few months ago. It's trite to say that he has loomed large since his triumph three years ago at the Liberal leadership convention. But I think few people would have anticipated that the issue would crystallize so suddenly around judgments of his moral worth.

Detested Him

You only have to mention late, successful politicians like Mackenzie King, Maurice Duplessis and Mitchell Hepburn to realize the opening question of this column is difficult.

Mr. King was prime minister when I first began to follow politics. In 1935, I scrutineered in my first election work for a candidate who stood for King.

My father, like so many railroaders, revered King. I did not. This grew into detestation during the conscription crisis in 1944-45. It was frustrating that Canadians kept re-electing King, not least because it was not done with great enthusiasm.

He was not a man you warmed to or cherished. I detested him. Now long after his passing, I meet others of my age who shared this low opinion.

Invariably, we find now that King ranks higher in our judgment. Perspective lets you see that he was a narrow, selfish, self-deluding man in many ways, terribly petty, capable of cruelty to his colleagues.

Greatest PM?

Yet his accomplishments — and I don't mean only mere survival in power — were considerable. A generation or two from now there's a likelihood that King will be thought our greatest prime minister.

It is possible that a like case could be made by Quebecers about Duplessis. Little that I've read since his demise improves the estimate of his character or excuses the extent of his chicanery and his meanness to those who might rival him.

On the other hand, a Quebecker could read much worth into his persistence and the question of autonomy and his organization and promotion of the Tremblay commission out of which came a new interpretation of Confederation that even the English Canadians came to accept.

Mitchell Hepburn was an engaging bounder, so quicksilver and confident. Once I helped carry him on to a plane in Northern Ontario, the Premier of Ontario, drunk and sodden but charming. He didn't leave much of a heritage. He was on the bad side in almost every controversy.

I'm always reminded of this by the good work over many years, right up to today of Senators Croll and Roebuck.

These were Hepburn ministers who fell into his disfavor and out of office. But Arthur Roebuck can still comment wryly about Hepburn's "magic" and some of the good things he did.

Leo the Lip

There are lots of other dead politicians one can reconsider in this question of whether unadmirable or objectionable traits in character should count in judging whether a man made an able or competent leader of a government.

Over in another popular arena, sport, the same argument always goes on. Do nice guys finish last, as Durocher said? Should they finish last? In wrestling, a sport carried to entertainment and then to a mimed drama, the issue is built right into most encounters. The Whipper Watsons against the scoundrels.

It is not so black and white in politics. More people are coming to know what so many of us around and in political Ottawa have known for months. Mr. Trudeau is capable of lies, bullying, arrogance in the extreme, evasion of the most obvious of duties to simple courtesy and a smart-alecky snottiness that is staggering.

No Compassion

He's a man without compassion. He refuses to accept responsibility for things he has set in train. He's a slippery master at putting the blame on others.

He can jeer and mock the unfortunate. He's the meanest politician in power whom I've seen. In comparison, Mackenzie King can even seem benign. So the question merges, more and more: Does it matter?

'Education'

If you see a shack standing next to a palace, you'll know that the one is a public library, the other a high school.

You'll know also that the high school is turning out people who will be content to let the public libary remain a shack. So much for "education."

—Richard Needham.

Let's Stop This Lunar Lunacy

NEW STATESMAN
An Editorial

Apart from national prestige there is no justification for continuing the manned Apollo flights.

Everything which the American astronauts do on the moon can be done better (and at one-tenth of the cost) by the Russian Lunar-pod. It can work night and day, walk further, probe deeper and pick up bigger nuggets of moon rock.

True, manned flight has stimulated considerable technological advances in the field of plastics and metal alloys. But there must be an easier and less expensive way of developing a non-stick frying pan than sending three men on a space voyage to the Sea of Tranquility.

●

Already a number of Americans are beginning to view the whole project with a disenchanted eye. The budget and staff of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have been reduced by half and three Apollo flights have been cut from the program.

Weightless toothbrushes, astronautic jokes and Bible readings from outer space have lost a good deal of their power to grip all-American imagination and many people are beginning to wonder whether the $20 billion which it cost to put Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin on the moon could not have been better spent in trying to solve some of America's pressing problems of urban poverty and atmospheric pollution.

This is of course to pose the question in an over-simplified way. It is by no means certain that the money and resources saved by home space exploration would be diverted to an attack on social problems.

●

The familiar criticisms of the space programs based on the calculation of how many hospitals could be built or how many cancer research programs financed with the money required to fire a rocket at the moon with three men on board are emotionally understandable, but they miss one important point.

The military establishment of the United States has a very lively interest in the space program — indeed the United States Air Force already plans to take over part of the post-Apollo program.

Thus it is far more likely that resources saved from space exploration would have been diverted to defence research and development than to any imaginative schemes concerned with the population explosion or the starving millions of the Third World, who continue to starve although they have become a cliche of the international political debate.

In the past the techniques of space flight have had a direct application to the evolution of military missile systems, both in the United States and in the Soviet Union.

Such spin-off is, however, subject to the law of diminishing returns, and it is unlikely that there is very much more that either side can learn from its space programs which will have any real effect upon its national security.

●

The intricacies of multiple independent re-entry vehicles and anti-ballistic missile defence systems have to some extent been resolved; certainly the residual problems are not so great as to justify the $300 million a shot the Apollo program is now costing.

Most of the really valuable spin-off from space exploration—including the use of satellites for communications, navigation and monitoring of weather patterns—would have been as readily available from unmanned space exploration.

Already the Soviet Union has realized this and has apparently decided to cut both the cost and the risks. When they landed Lunar 17 last November and sent the eight-wheeled Lunokhod I trundling grotesquely over the moon's surface, they calculated that a similar manned flight, designed to provide the same information, would have cost 10 times as much.

Astronauts Shepard, Mitchell on the moon

It is doubtful whether the knowledge gained from space exploration of any kind is worth the enormous expenditure of resources. Even those who dismiss this argument as the worst kind of obscurantism are far from being convinced that manned space flight has any great advantage in purely scientific terms.

When President Kennedy announced the intention of the United States to put a man on the moon, he was really announcing the beginning of a race between the Americans and the Russians.

To have lost the race would have been a severe blow to American self-esteem; and it is possible to argue that this kind of ritualised competition between the super-powers provides a comparatively harmless outlet for a confrontation which might otherwise take more violent form; it is certainly better that they should be flexing their muscles in space than rattling their sabres in the Middle East or Indochina or Eastern Europe.

(When they do both, the argument loses much of its force.)

●

Many Americans, however, believe that the space race was won when Apollo 12 made its successful landing. The near tragedy of Apollo 13 underlined the growing sense of impatience with the whole operation; and when Mr. Spiro Agnew appeared on television recently with a spirited endorsement of the manned space flight program even more people must have begun to doubt its value.

Even with its resources cut, NASA still plans to spend something like $3.5 billion a year and to employ nearly 150,000 people.

There are plans to send three more manned space craft to the moon and to put a space station in orbit before 1980. If President Nixon is really looking for some way to make his mark on American history, he might consider putting a stop to this whole wasteful enterprise before it ends in real disaster.

Make a Swell Park

By ART STOTT

In those days when two-bits was big spending money for a kid, I made an honest quarter occasionally by "minding" the small son of our neighbors. When he was reasonably steady on his feet, his father bought him a child's football. The seashore lot next door was vacant and I gathered three poles from the beach, stuck in a couple for uprights and topped them with a crossbar to make goal posts.

After that "minding" became more masculine. We'd go to the vacant lot, kick the ball around and shoot goals, much to his delight and the satisfaction of his father, who had been athletic.

Came a day of minor tragedy. Somebody bought the vacant lot, knocked down the goal posts and started excavating for a house. My small friend rushed to his home heartbroken, telling his mother men were spoiling his football field.

★ ★ ★

I took the loss more philosophically. The new owner of the lot was entitled to build his home there. And anyhow, the small boy was growing up, needed less "minding," with a consequent loss to me of quarter-earning opportunities, and I was making 35 cents one afternoon a week cutting the neighbor's grass. It sufficed.

Vacant waterfront lots from Beacon Hill Park around the south-easterly coast to beyond Ten Mile Point are almost non-existent now, except where a municipality has reserved a small playfield.

With relatively few exceptions, public access to the beaches below private property is fairly easy — and the rocks around the shoreline are open to anyone nimble enough to scramble over them.

★ ★ ★

The sentiment grows stronger, however, in some segments of the community that waterfront lots should all be parkland, that the public has a right to their enjoyment and that anyone who alienates property fronting on the sea is selfish, anti-social and feudal in outlook.

No one denies that waterfront lots are of prime value. Those who acquired them during the last half century paid premiums for them — and Mr. Bennett's assessment system, predicated on sales price, automatically raises the owner's taxes.

The costs are higher to live on the waterfront, but as long as many of us can meet them, the location is worth the price. When we can no longer afford the luxury, the planners have a scheme which would take the Gonzales Bay shore property into a park — long after I was gone, according to the assurance I have been given.

Philosophically I agree with the point of view that areas of particular amenities and scenic attraction deserve consideration as parks. As our community becomes more congested, it will be essential to provide for citizens additional open space and, hopefully, serenity in it to supply the therapy required in a future that promises increasing tensions.

I'm not quite so sold, though, on the idea that I should move out of my home, or that my neighbors should be dispossessed, to permit conversion of a developed area into a recreational site for the public. My attitude is not isolated, if I read correctly the newspaper accounts of other home-owners, far back from the seashore, objecting to expropriation proceedings which force them from their homes when the property is needed for some public purpose.

The argument in this case is qualitatively different from that of the large commercial interests which move into wilderness, strip it of resources and leave it something less than parkland when their operations are completed.

Still, my lot and those of my neighbors was largely bushland, with an occasional open field, when I was a boy. I've contributed to a change in the physical characteristics of that region. The pheasants no longer set up their call there in spring, the quail seldom scuttle across the lawn. The multitude of songbirds have largely been replaced by robins, by crows and by detestable starlings as the underbrush and trees have gone. I expect people to invade my privacy only by invitation now, although the traffic of youngsters along the shoreline rocks is heavier than ever.

Still, it's my home. I've invested in it more than money — and I collect dividends in the enjoyment of the changing sea, the transformation of the mountains across the strait morning, afternoon and evening, the simple pleasures of beachcombing and the reluctant satisfaction of harvesting garden crops.

Under other circumstances, this part of the coastline might have been converted into a "front" as in Blackpool, Torquay, or even Coney Island. Had it been, the opportunity for enjoyment might have been extended to a great deal more people than my family, my neighbors and my friends. But who wants Blackpool, Torquay or Coney Island? Not me.

By all means let's have more parks, seaside and otherwise. Only let's have them somewhere else. Selfish of me, no doubt.

GALLUP POLL

Most Like Job Trudeau Doing

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION
(World Copyright Reserved)

A national assessment by the voters, of the job Trudeau is doing as prime minister, reveals that in broad terms three-in-ten consider it excellent; four rank it as fair; two call it disappointing, and one is undecided.

But how does Trudeau's performance stand up in view of those who support the main political parties? Set against the national average of 73% who give him the favorable rating of excellent or fair, Liberal voters raise it to almost total support, with a level of 93%, with 6% disappointed.

Adherents of the opposition parties inevitably take a different view, but even here, the majority are favorable—a total of 54% among Conservatives, and 52% among the NDP and other adherents. This compares with 38% in Conservative ranks and 43% among the NDP and other parties who label it disappointing.

On the same basis, Trudeau is given a favorable rating by 77% of those voters in homes where the head of the household is an executive, or a professional worker, or in the sales and clerical jobs. This compared with 69% in the homes of labor, and 72% among farmers and others.

The question:

"HOW WOULD YOU RATE THE JOB MR. TRUDEAU IS DOING AS PRIME MINISTER — EXCELLENT, FAIR, OR DISAPPOINTING?"

Detailed attitudes among voters for the main political parties, and in occupational groups, is compared below with the national average of opinion.

	Excellent	Fair	Disappointing	Undecided
CANADA	29%	44%	21%	6%
Liberals	50	43	6	1
Conservatives	8	46	38	8
NDP and Others	18	34	43	5
Executives; Professional	37	40	18	5
White Collar; Sales	29	48	20	3
Labor	23	46	24	7
Farm and Other	32	40	21	7

Asked the same question in 1962, about the Prime Minister, John Diefenbaker, 62% gave a rating of excellent or fair to his work, and 31% said they were disappointed.

Trustee Airs Views In Support of Budget

Trustee Gordon Ewan demanded at Saanich school board meeting Monday the chance to air his views on the school budget as a matter of personal privilege.

"In view of the fact that one trustee (Trevor Davis) has aired his objections to the budget in the press," said Ewan, "other board members should have equal rights to state publicly their support of the budget.

"We are elected by the ratepayers and in my area (Central Saanich) we checked with ratepayers and municipal council. Indications were that school board ought to operate within the limitations of the finance formula."

Trustee Harry Tobin commented that 150 man-hours had been spent on budget deliberations and Trustee John Pennington chimed in: "We cut our cloth according to the material. I am not prepared to accept too much criticism."

Chairman Jack Armstrong conceded that Trustee Davis had revealed matters discussed in camera but said that he concurred with many points made by Davis.

Referring to cuts in the instruction budget and the 33 to 1 student-teacher ratio approved by the board, Armstrong said "I want to make it clear that none of our teachers will be dismissed, simply relocated."

School Board To Appeal Health Levy

Saanich school board discovered on Monday that is is assessed $5,103.90 by the metropolitan board of health this year for services to the public.

On the advice of Trustee Charles MacNeill the board will request to the department of education that this practice be discontinued.

"This is money we cannot spend for education," MacNeill pointed out. He said the present setup dates from the unorganized era of the peninsula and is based on 1966 census figures. The assessment works out at 30 cents per person for a population of 17,017.

Sidney, North and Central Saanich municipalities are not assessed by the metro health board, according to Trustee MacNeill.

SIDNEY SCOUTS OPEN NEW HALL

Memories of the day when the first Scout meeting was held at Sidney in 1913 were recalled over the weekend when a new Scout Hall was opened on Third Street.

Freeman F. King, who attended that meeting, officially opened the new hall.

He told the crowd of parents, children and friends who crammed the hall:

"We met in what was known as the laundry shack, with blackberry vines growing through the floor, and a stable lantern on a beam for light."

King added that the Sidney group is one of the oldest in the province.

Prior to his speech there was a flag-raising and presentation of colors ceremony. This was followed by a brief religious service conducted by Rev. William Mudge, assisted by Rev. R. A. Sansom and Rev. R. H. Pratt.

UNVEILS PLAQUE

King unveiled a plaque which commemorated the opening of the hall. The former Anglican church hall, the building was moved to its present location Jan. 1, 1970.

Since then it has undergone major reconstruction with the work being tackled by a number of parents, community-minded residents and organizations.

Mrs. King cut the official ribbon, made up in the colors of the various troops belonging to the district, and declared the hall opened.

She was presented with a bouquet of red carnations by Brownie Theresa Craiger.

During the afternoon four special awards were presented by district commissioner Jack Anderton. Jonathon Moffoot and Danny Tomsett received the Silver Challenge award, the Bronze Challenge award was presented to Fred Bowcott and Don Griffiths was given the Pioneer Challenge award.

SPECIAL REGULATION

Ottawa Protecting Narwhals

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal fisheries department has established a special regulation to protect the Narwhal as part of Canada's living heritage.

A departmental conservation officer Tuesday explained that the action was not prompted by last year's fatal end to Vancouver Aquarium's expedition except indirectly.

A pod of six of the unique Arctic Dolphin was transferred to Vancouver where they died while in temporary sea pens.

It's feared that publicity about scientific expeditions like that one might prompt private citizens to try to get Narwhal for the sake of the trophy value of the yard-long ivory tusk that is characteristic of the species.

NOT FOR TUSKS

"There's a great deal more travel in the north now and we just want to make it crystal clear that people are not to take Narwhal for their tusks and should not try to induce an Eskimo to get one for them without permit either," said J. G. Hutchison, Acting Director of Conservation and Protection.

The new regulation prohibits anyone from "taking or killing" a Narwhal except Eskimos and scientific expeditions given a permit by the minister.

An Eskimo is allowed to kill five Narwhal each year without a permit but only for food.

Hutchison said that Eskimo were free to sell the tusks to tourists and any scientific permits would likely include a stipulation that Eskimos be employed at a prearranged fee to ensure that they obtained some benefit.

PERMIT NEEDED

He said that permits have always been needed by outsiders in the past but the requirement was buried among the general fisheries regulations. The Vancouver Aquarium had permits.

"We decided that the time had come to make a special regulation singling Narwhal out — as we have done previously with seals, sea lions and killer whales — so that there was absolutely no uncertainty in the North that they are protected," said Hutchison.

"The Narwhal is not an endangered species. There are an estimated 10,000 of them in the Arctic Ocean and the Eskimos take no more than 200 of them in a year.

"We just felt it would be good preventive measures to make it clear we want to keep the Narwhale from becoming endangered since they are a special part of our Arctic heritage."

Hutchison said that Aquariums in Dusseldorf, Germany, and Ontario have asked about permits since the Vancouver expedition but have not pressed the applications until more could be learned about why the pod died.

School Renovation Presented

North Saanich Junior Secondary will have an $83,000 renovation if plans described at Saanich school board meeting Monday night get provincial government approval.

Building supervisor Brain Shaw described the plans to upgrade some classrooms, improve ventilation, install more showers and increase fire-proofing. The plans are part of school alterations budgeted for in a 1968 referendum and due to be completed by the end of this year.

New firewalls are imperative, Shaw said.

"At present there is nothing to stop a fire in the old building."

"Should we stop it?" questioned Trustee Gordon Ewan.

Trustee Harry Tobin expressed surprise that this money should be spent when a new high school is planned for the area but Shaw said the original building will continue to be used, eventually being phased into an elementary school.

Any delay will increase costs, said Shaw, who added he felt the government, which pays 75 per cent of the costs, would be in the mood to grant approval at this time.

In other business, the board accepted the tender of J. McLaren Construction to build a new gymnasium for $188,612 at Royal Oak Junior Secondary.

Bourassa Ready to Blame Ottawa If His Make-Jobs Policy Fails

By DON MacPHERSON

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa announced Tuesday his Liberal government will introduce measures this year to try to put Quebec's staggering economy back on a firm footing.

Mr. Bourassa emphasized reducing unemployment and strengthening the economy as the government's top aims this year.

But in his inaugural address opening the new session of the Quebec national assembly, he also said Ottawa will be largely to blame for Quebec unemployment if the provinces are not allowed to participate in redefining Canada's economic priorities.

He said his government's plans to stimulate economic development and create new jobs in the province depend on the federal attitude.

WILL BE FIRM

"All our efforts could prove fruitless or marginal if the fiscal, tariff and monetary policies of the federal government are not co-ordinated without economic development priorities," he said.

Mr. Bourassa said his government has many proposals to hammer out with Ottawa and the province will proceed with "firmness" to obtain its needs.

At the provincial level, he said, the government plans to introduce new measures and modify existing structures and programs to enable it to promote economic development.

Mr. Bourassa has maintained since last spring's Quebec general election, in which his Liberals came into office, that the province's economy is his main pre-occupation.

However, the large number of general proposals included in the speech outlining government aims indicates that Mr. Bourassa now apparently feels his government finally has the means to implement policies according to its own priorities.

Mr. Bourassa said existing laws to aid industrial development would be changed to enable more productive use of available financial resources.

In addition, industries which produce more economic development and jobs would be favored in the government's development aid programs.

DEPARTMENT ROLES CHANGE

Government departments and agencies such as the departments of lands and forests, natural resources and tourism and the various development agencies would be given greater economic importance.

Technical assistance programs would be set up to help small and medium-sized industries, and municipal industrial funds would be created, aid would be given to industrial commissions, the interest rates on development loans would be reduced and an industrial development agency would be created.

The measures are intended to boost the effects of an expected economic recovery in the late spring and early summer, producing new economic activity and generating new jobs.

The economic slowdown has drawn unemployment in Quebec upward in its highest level since the early 1960s.

In January, the unemployment rate in Quebec was 10.2 per cent, with 234,000 persons out of work, and economists say the jobless rate could go as high as 12 per cent this month and in March.

STARTS SOME PROGRAMS

So far, the government has created a number of make-work programs in such areas as road building and housing construction, which it feels have been successful in holding down the unemployment rate.

Mr. Bourassa made it clear that he wants more financial help from the federal government in the form of grants for economic development and a say in determining the federal government's fiscal, tariff and monetary policies.

Quebec wanted the "financial means and constitutional powers allowing it to promote the cultural future of Quebecers," he said.

"All Quebec's efforts to orient its development in a rational manner could nevertheless lead to nothing and produce only marginal results if the central government's fiscal, tariff and monetary policies are not co-ordinated without development priorities."

In addition to economic measures, Mr. Bourassa made several proposals to improve legislation in several other areas, including municipal administration, and said the government will present white papers on its policies in a number of fields.

Missed Boat, Fuddle Duddle Seen in Reply

A letter to Immigration Minister Otto Lang from Oak Bay council has drawn a reply of "four or five paragraphs of missing the boat and fuddle duddle," council was told Monday night.

Oak Bay had sent the minister a copy of an ad which appeared in U.K. newspapers, calling attention to liberal welfare benefits as well as other inducements to emigrate to Canada.

Lang's reply consisted largely of a general treatise on federal immigration policies and made no mention of the welfare issue.

Said Ald. Alan Hoey, who made the fuddle-duddle charge: "I wonder if he read our letter?"

Solve Young Feuds . . . With Kid Gloves

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Rev. J. W. Flaherty, a silver-haired Roman Catholic priest, says boxing gloves should be used to settle differences between feuding youngsters in Ontario's separate schools.

He told his congregation at St. Andrew's Church Sunday: "Every boy should be taught how to defend himself."

Father Flaherty, a trustee on the Halton County separate school board, said he laces on the gloves himself to meet two assistant priests.

Saturday, he said he was knocked flat by one of them after a punch to the mouth.

"Good," said someone in the third pew.

"When I heard that I almost fell out of the pulpit," he said after in an interview.

Father Flaherty said he planned to approach his board to ask for money for boxing gloves for all separate schools.

Alberta Ombudsman Defends Himself

By WALTER KREVENCHUK

EDMONTON (CP) — North America's first ombudsman, appointed in 1967 to defend the citizens of Alberta against unfair decisions by government agencies, has felt compelled to defend himself and his office.

George B. McClellan, a former RCMP commissioner, has placed his case before the legislature in a special report that deals primarily with harsh criticism of the ombudsman by a former Alberta chief justice.

Colin Cameron McLaurin, the former chief justice, conducted a government-ordered inquiry into Mr. McClellan's investigation of a case involving a former Edmonton real estate salesman. He said the ombudsman had "glaringly" flouted the law under which he operates because he had not investigated both sides in the dispute.

Mr. McLaurin said the ombudsman's report to the cabinet on the case was "biased, unfair and inaccurate."

After what he described as the most exhaustive investigation made by the ombudsman's office, Mr. McClellan said R. J. Philipzyk was wrongfully expelled in 1966 from the Edmonton Real Estate Co-Operative Listing Bureau Ltd.

SUGGESTED DAMAGES

He suggested the expulsion was partly due to the government's action in allowing the bureau to incorporate as a co-operative and that Mr. Philipzyk should receive damages from the province.

Mr. McLaurin said Mr. Philipzyk ws "rightfully expelled," that no government compensation should be paid, and that no changes were necessary in the bureau's bylaws or provincial legislation.

In the special report, Mr. McClellan said "this is the harshest criticism I have received in over 38 years of public service."

"My judgment has been called into question on previous occasions; my impartiality and my credibility, never.

"There are no more difficult charges to defend one's self against than charges of this nature. There is little a man can do but deny them, if he feels they are wrong, and a simple denial is of no real assistance in disarming such charges. . . .

"If at any time the members of the legislative assembly should ever come to feel that they have lost confidence in the ombudsman, I would hope to be the first to know. My position would be untenable, and my course would be clear."

Mr. McClellan said he and Commissioner McLaurin approached the case from considerably different directions. Mr. McLaurin's report made strict legality an issue.

"My approach was a different one," Mr. McClellan said, "for the Ombudsman Act permits me to go far beyond legality, and to consider matters of discrimination, oppressiveness, unreasonableness; and even to consider whether any practice on which a decision, recommendation, act or omission was based, should be altered, or, indeed, that any other steps should be taken."

"I am a layman, and it was my earnest belief that the manner in which this bureau was brought into being as a co-operative, and the resultant effect on Mr. Philipzyk . . . would be sufficient to indicate that he had suffered an injustice.

". . . I at no time attempted to ascertain the guilt or innocence of Mr. Philipzyk. I regarded this as none of my business. My sole concern was the correctness, or otherwise, of the procedures, which were used against him, and the law . . . which might have sanctioned his expulsion contrary to natural justice.

Mr. McClellan said the legislature has given the ombudsman authority to range outside a purely legal position and to look at a number of other factors.

". . . The mere fact that something which has been done is legal under the law is no bar to the ombudsman examining the practice or procedure from several other distinctly different viewpoints."

N.Y. Times

The New York Times Co., in a preliminary unaudited report, says its consolidated net income declined in 1970 due to a combination of reduced advertising revenues and sharply increased costs.

The company reported preliminary consolidated net income of $9.78 million or $1.10 a share, down from $14.8 million or $1.71 a share in 1969. The Times said 1970 revenues were $231.1 million compared with $238.1 million the previous year.

American Airlines

American Airlines Inc. has reported that it lost $26.39 million in 1970, compared with a profit of $38.46 million in 1969. Revenues increased to $1.13 billion from $1.03 billion in 1969.

The company said the major causes of the earnings decline were reduced traffic growth due to economic slowdown, rising costs and inability to raise fares.

It added other contributing factors included introduction of the Boeing 747, and start-up costs of new services in the Pacific.

Voyager

Net income rose from $44,216 in the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1969, to $52,569 in the period last year, reports Voyager Petroleums Ltd., of Calgary.

Cash flow for three months was 70 per cent higher at $185,631, basically due to new sales from the Plain gas field where a plant went on stream in November.

Total income was $264,268 vs. $165,766, and income per share was .017 cents compared with .014 cents. In the nine months ended Dec. 31 income was $170,499 vs. $42,873 or five cents against two cents a share.

Warner

Net earnings of E. C. Warner Investments Ltd. in the year ended Sept. 30, 1970 nearly doubled from the same period in 1968-69, largely due to earnings of a new subsidiary.

The company reports total earnings of $77,757 compared with $46,912, with $25,000 of the latest earnings from dividends paid by wholly-owned Melograin Milling Co. Ltd., which was bought for $350,000.

Net earnings after tax amounted to $45,445 vs. $23,465, plus $3,321 on sale of investments vs. $24,179 in 1969. Retained earnings at the start of the year amounted to $146,427 against $139,854 the previous year, and at year-end retained earnings were $101,174 compared with $97,661 the year before. Working capital declined from $147,587 to $114,372.

Tax Tips

Tax Tips, a daily feature in the Times, is prepared by the Victoria District Office, National Revenue, Taxation. For additional information on preparation of your income tax return, write to the Victoria office of National Revenue, Taxation.

Q. Last year I won a scholarship. Is this taxable?

A. If the scholarship is a prize for academic achievement and had nothing to do with your job, it is not taxable. In other circumstances, you could take up the question with your District Taxation Office.

Q. My wife has interest from bonds that I purchased for her in her name. Is this interest my wife's income or is it my income because the original payment for bonds was made by me?

A. The interest is your income because you purchased the bonds from your funds. The same rule would apply to dividends on shares, interest on savings accounts and so on. It is the person who had the money to invest who must report the income earned.

Q. I have rented my farm out on a crop-share basis for the last five years. Would I still be able to average my income for tax purposes?

A. Yes, if this rental income is your chief source of income.

Q. I am over 65 years of age and no longer contribute to the Canada Pension Plan. Do I still have to have a Social Insurance Number?

A. Yes. Originally it was required only by those taxpayers making contributions to the Canada Pension Plan but now it is required by all those who file an Income Tax Return. Application forms for Social Insurance Numbers are available from any Post Office, District Taxation Office, Unemployment Insurance Office or office of the Department of Health and Welfare.

Q. I am self-employed and I pay into a retirement savings plan with an Insurance company. I have no salaried income whatsoever and understand that I can claim for income tax purposes, a maximum of $2,500 for my retirement savings plan. Is this correct?

A. If you are not covered by an employees pension plan you would be entitled to claim amounts paid into a registered retirement savings plan up to $2,500, or 20 per cent of your earned income for the year, whichever is less.

Q. I understand that only a portion of my union dues is allowed as a deduction from my income tax. How do I know how much I can pay for my union dues, and how do I know what is an allowable deduction?

A. Your union should inform you of the amount you can claim for your union dues, by giving you a receipt to file with your income tax return.

Q. We had our first child last month. How do I go about having my tax deductions changed, or do I need to do anything?

A. A child will affect your exemption status and if you would like this reflected in the amount of tax deducted from each paycheck, you should notify your personnel office and they will have you fill out a new TD1 form. Or, if you perfer, you can continue with your deductions as they are and enjoy the benefits of the additional exemption when you file your income tax return for the year.

Q. I am a student at University and I have a part-time job which becomes a full-time job during the summer months. My income is over $950 a year and therefore my father cannot claim me on his income tax form as a dependant. I pay for my own tuition fees out of my earnigs and understand that I can deduct these fees from my income for taxation puhposes. If I do this my income will be under $950. Does this mean that my father can then claim me as a dependant?

A. Yes. If your father supported you during the year and your income after deducting your tuition fees was less than $950, he would be entitled to claim you as a dependant.

IN SOUTH AMERICA

Auto Industry Thrives

BUENOS AIRES (WP)—The auto industry is playing a major role in Argentina and Brazilian development, much as it did in the United States. Indeed, the influence of the car may be greater here, though production is still far smaller than in North America.

But there is litfle evidence that the Latin societies affected by the automobile have profited from the U.S. experience by learning to consider early in the process the total costs of the industry. The occasional voice raised to complain of pollution or congestion is lost among the honking horns.

South American countries see industry as the answer to their ills, but they are often frustrated in efforts to develop it. Thus the auto companies — with their product of international quality, and their stable supply of jobs — are most welcome.

Management is often concentrated in foreign hands. Yet even in this time of intense nationalism, there are few calls for takeover of local Fiat or General Motors investments.

Chile, Peru and other relatively small countries have less an auto industry than assembly operations, though efforts are afoot to decrease the number of plants while increasing the percentage of parts that are locally made. Eight years ago, 20 companies in Chile assembled 40 models for a total annual production of 35,000 units. Soon the number of plants will be down to two or three, with over half of the average car's value originating locally.

FASTEST GROWTH

In Argentina and Brazil, domestic production accounts for over 90 per cent of the value of the car or truck. Brazil, with 93 million people, has the continent's fastest economic growth rate and its most dynamic auto industry. The cars' role in the economy is crucial.

According to an unpublished study, a full four per cent of the estimated nine per cent growth that Brazil's national product registered in 1969 was attributable solely to expansion of the auto industry.

The typical Brazilian buying a car earns less than half as much as his American counterpart, yet he pays a far higher price. According to the study this is accomplished by complex credit arrangements which will absorb all of the buyer's savings capacity for years to come.

VOLKSWAGEN TOPS

Most of Brazil's automobile production is by Volkswagen, whose huge Sao Paulo plant recently built its millionth car.

Seven European and North American makers divide the Latin American market, selling models that would confuse the U.S. car watcher. For example, the Ford just off the line is the twin of the Falcon built in Detroit seven years ago. Renault builds on licence a Rambler outdated in the United States.

Gentle John Winks At the Lady Byng

BILL WALKER

He was a door-to-door soap salesman. That's only a small part of it though. Which is by way of answering a query as to what did Jack Kent Cooke do before he got to where he is today?

He did many things, did Jack, and was indeed a soap salesman before graduating to more lucrative fields. He pushed encyclopedias for a time, was involved in radio, and even ran a publishing business when he was associated with newspaper magnate Roy Thomson, now Lord Thomson of Fleet. But all that was before he left Canada, by choice, his, to jump hip deep into the American professional sports scene.

To the sports buff of today, Cooke is probably best known as being the owner of the Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League. In reality, however, the Kings are one of his minor interests, besides being one place where, unhappily, he hasn't been able to get the job done.

For if there is one thing that Cooke wants most out of life, it is a Stanley Cup victory.

He isn't going to get it this year, which is almost for sure, but nevertheless he still stands to make a million or two. For besides his Kings, he has the Lakers basketball team, which cost him over $5 million, and which fills his Fabulous Forum on most nights they play.

He is also on record as having purchased a quarter interest in the Washington Redskins football team for $250,000. And that little gambit probably has earned him another couple of million. The stock alone has jumped that much in value since 1960.

●

The end-all which is Cooke's dream is a hat trick in pro team championships—the Kings, the Lakers and the Redskins, all in the same season. But that is another story.

Never one to pass up a bargain, he snapped at the latest plum. He didn't hesitate very long when he was asked if he would like to bankroll the Muhammad Ali—Joe Frazier heavyweight championship fight.

For this honor he was asked to put up his share of $5 million, which the figters will get. In return, among other considerations, Cooke and his partners received closed theatre TV rights. This alone is a bonanza. For already they have much more than their money back in guarantees, and when the final take is in, stand to make several million.

They have a built-in best-seller, and no sales problems.

Even in New York, where the live fight already is a sellout, 30 New York area theatres are reportedly sold out as well. And the tariff runs as high as $15 a seat for the filmed version of the scrap. It is $10 here.

The odd part of the deal is that Cooke's partner, Jerry Perenchio, tried to interest others in his promotion, but had no takers. Not so Cooke. He recognized the possibilities, supplied the cash, and now is about to reap the profits at no risk.

●

And yes, it is true, as P. J. Smith has suggested.

Vancouver coach Hal Laycoe was offered the GM's job at Los Angeles in that very first expansion season of 1967. He rejected it, and chose instead to purchase an interest in the Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League. It was two years later that Laycoe decided to make the switch, but this time as coach.

That he didn't make it is just one of life's interesting experiments as far as Laycoe is concerned. "I didn't know it was win or else," he said at the time of his dismissal.

And although Laycoe really doesn't hold it against Cooke for his removal—the gut issue being Laycoe and general manager Larry Reagan didn't always see eye to eye—there was one instance which probably showed the intense desire Cooke had for an impressive performance by his Kings.

It was early in the 1969 season and the Kings had blanked Pittsburgh 2-0. That shutout had come on the heels of a 5-0 win over Oakland. The Kings had scored two shutouts in a row. It had never happened before. Or since.

Was the boss pleased? Not at all. Because in winning, the Kings, and Laycoe, had neglected one small item. They had taken only 13 shots on goal in the win over Pittsburgh.

"Thirteen shots on goal," charged Cooke. "There's no way a team of mine is going to play that way."

Later, the Kings didn't, and results turned from bad to worse. Laycoe was out of a job, and there were no more shutouts either.

But what if Cooke doesn't know a shutout from a defeat. He can always sniff out a dollar bill.

Perhaps nine million of them, this time. And that's no soap.

Mohns, Caffery Dealt to Stars For Dan O'Shea

By The Canadian Press

Johnny Bucyk, in his 14th season with Boston Bruins, appears determined to improve his second-finish in last year's balloting for the Lady Byng Memorial Trophy as the National Hockey League player best combining sportsmanship with ability.

The 35-year-old Edmonton native fired his 38th goal this season and the 350th of his career as the Bruins dumped Buffalo Sabres 6-3 in the only game Tuesday night.

In tonight's action, Montreal Canadiens meet California Golden Seals at Oakland, New York Rangers play host to Philadelphia Flyers, St. Louis Blues tangle with the Penguins at Pittsburgh and Los Angeles Kings visit Minnesota North Stars.

Bucyk, who became the 10th NHL player to reach the 350-goal mark, added two assists and his goal touched off a three-goal outburst that locked up the game for Boston.

With the 38 goals and 46 assists, Bucyk pulled into sole possession of fourth place in the NHL's scoring race. His 84 points, together with only four minutes in penalties this season, make him a prime candidate for the Lady Byng.

SANDERSON SCORES

The Bruins took a one-goal lead late in the first period when Derek Sanderson connected with his 22nd marker. John McKenzie made it 2-0 only seconds into the second period before Steven Atkinson got the first Buffalo score.

Then Bucyk, Phil Esposito and Ken Hodge scored for Boston within a seven-minute span. Esposito's goal, his 51st of the season, gave the league's scoring leader 114 points.

Gil Perreault of Buffalo, a strong contender for the Calder Memorial Trophy as best rookie of the year, scored his 30th goal late in the period to lift his season's point total to 55.

The teams exchanged third-period goals, Bobby Orr banging in his 29th for the Bruins and Tracy Pratt getting his first for Buffalo.

Orr's goal plus two assists increased his point output to 101, second to Esposito.

INCREASE LEAD

Boston increased its East Division lead to nine points over New York, second with 82. Buffalo remained one point ahead of cellar-dwelling Vancouver Canucks, who have 42 points.

Earlier in the day, Minnesota completed two trades in hope of strengthening it's fourth-place position in the West Division. The North Stars are one point ahead of Pittsburgh with 52 points, and one behind Philadelphia.

The North Stars sent centre Danny O'Shea to Chicago Black Hawks for left winger Doug Mohns and centre Terry Caffrey. A few hours later, they traded centre Tommy Williams to California for centre Ted Hampson.

O'Shea, 25, scored 25 goals and 58 assists in two seasons with Minnesota and had 14 goals and 12 assists this year. Mohns, 37, scored four goals for Chicago this season for a career total of 234 while Caffrey had 11 goals and 31 assists with Dallas in the Central Hockey League.

Williams, 30, had been dropped from the North Stars early this month for insubordination. The North Stars also will send a player, to be named at the end of the season, for Hampson who scored 10 goals and assisted on 20 others.

THE AGONY OF A LOSING COACH

The team record is three wins and 23 losses for coach Herb Livsey of Orange Coast College in Costa Mesa, Calif., but there is no lack of interest or exhortation on his part. Livsey takes tranquilizers, has an ulcer and says his stomach is killing him.

PERRY RINK BOWS IN B.C. PLAYOFF

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kelly Carin of Kamloops built a commanding early lead, then coasted to a 9-6 victory over Chuck Perry of Comox Tuesday in the deciding game of a best-of-three playoff for the British Columbia mixed Curling championship.

Carin's rink led, 6-0, after four ends and clinched it by stealing two in the seventh. Perry scored three in the eighth and one in the ninth, 10th and final end.

Perry won the first game Monday, 8-4, but dropped the second Monday night when he missed a crucial draw attempt on an extra end, allowing Carin to win, 8-7.

The Carin rink, which includes third Ev Stringer, second George Stringer and lead Doreen Carin, will represent B.C. at the Canadian final at Saint John, N.B.

Cougars Spark All-Star Rally

VANCOUVER — Players from Victoria Cougars played a starring role in a third-period rally which gave All-Stars a 6-5 victory over Vancouver Centennials in the first British Columbia Junior Hockey League all-star game Tuesday before approximately 1,600 fans.

Behind 5-4 at 5:42 of the third period, left winger Bruce Cowick of Cougars tipped in a loose puck from in front of the crease at 6:53 to tie the score.

Another Cougar player, Ted Plowe, set up the winning goal by Vic Mercredi of Penticton Broncos at 7:58.

Mercredi and Wayne Dye of Vernon Essos each scored twice for All-Stars while singles were chipped in by Doug Manchak (Kelowna Buckaroos) and Cowick.

Vancouver goalscorers were Ray Todd and Gordie Stewart, with two apiece, and Pat Russell.

Ed Forslund of Cougars was in the net for the first half of the game, allowing four of the Vancouver goals.

Dave McLelland of Penticton replaced Forslund midway through the second period.

B.C. Rink Upsets Alberta

KAMLOOPS — Brent Giles' North Vancouver rink edged highly-rated Alberta, 5-4 and then whipped winless Prince Edward Island, 8-5, Tuesday to keep British Columbia hot on the heels of leading Saskatchewan in the Candian schoolboy curling championships.

B.C.'s win over Alberta climaxed a three-hour marathon which was tied 1-1 after end of the third end, 3-3 after six ends and 4-4 starting the ninth. After the fourth-draw victory, B.C. had three wins and one loss.

Manitoba, with three wins, was the only other undefeated side after the fourth draw. Manitoba downed New Brunswick, 9-6, after having a bye in the third draw.

Moore Still Unbeaten, Three Rinks Share Top

(Times News Service)

HALIFAX — The British Columbia rink, skipped by Gordie Moore of Victoria, cleared two tough hurdles Tuesday to remain undefeated in the Canadian seniors curling championships.

With victories over Northern Ontario and Prince Edward Island, the Moore rink now has a record of four wins and no losses. But B.C. isn't alone in first place. Entering today's play Harry Cole's Quebec rink and Alberta, skipped by Stu Pearce, also had 4-0 records.

Moore's first clutch win Tuesday came against Northern Ontario, which tied the score at 7-7 in the seventh and then added a pair in the ninth to be leading 9-8 coming home.

Moore, aided by strong sweeping from his rink, drew to the back of the button against another B.C. rock for the winning points and a 10-9 victory.

STEALS TWO

In his second match, Moore defeated Dr. Wendell MacDonald of P.E.I., 8-6. It was P.E.I.'s first defeat, the B. C. - P. E. I.

Quebec had no problem with Northern Ontario, taking an early 5-0 lead on the way to a 10-6 triumph. Alberta had a tougher time in defeating winless Newfoundland, 7-5.

In other fourth-round matches, Ontario's rink, skipped by Gord Wallace, whipped New Brunswick, 11-1, and Mac McCrimmon of Saskatchewan defeated Hugh Little's Nova Scotia foursome, 14-4.

Heavy Ice Plagues Women's Playoffs

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Skip Clare Purdy blames the ice for Nova Scotia's four straight losses in the Canadian women's curling championship.

"I know it's a poor excuse," she said Tuesday night, "but it's true.

"The ice is heavy here and our ice at home is very keen."

Sue Ann Bartlett's Newfoundland rink trounced Nova Scotia 12-4 in the fourth round.

Nova Scotia lost 13-3 to Saskatchewan in the third, 14-3 to Alberta in the second and 13-4 to New Brunswick in the first.

"You have to adjust to this kind of ice and the girls haven't yet," Mrs. Purdy said.

Temperature at ice-level rose to 45 degrees at one point in Tuesday's play. Most curlers prefer about 35.

Four rinks went into today's fifth round with 3-1 records—Prince Edward Island skipped by Marie Toole, Kay Baldwin's Alberta rink, defending-champion Saskatchewan skipped by Vera Pezer and Mrs. Mabel Mitchell's Manitoba team.

WIN TWO, LOSE TWO

Newfoundland, Ina Hansen's British Columbia rink and Quebec skipped by Nicole Janelle had 2-2 records. Helen Sillman's Ontario team and New Brunswick skipped by Shirley Pilsen had 1-3 records.

Although the western rinks were regarded as among the most powerful, Miss Toole said Prince Edward Island does not fear them above the others.

"We're hoping to do fairly well," she said, recalling the province won four games last year and six in 1969.

Longden Leaving McMahon

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Longden, who retired as a jockey in 1966 after setting a record for riding victories, has resigned as trainer for Frank McMahon's stables.

Longden has been a trainer for McMahon, a Canadian millionaire and long-time friend, since he stepped down after riding 6,032 winners, a record broken last year by Bill Shoemaker.

It was reported that Longden, 63, wants to help his wife Hazel train her horses, including a possible Kentucky-Derby Contender, Diplomatic Agent. Longden was unavailable for comment Tuesday, but his wife denied he was leaving McMahon to assist her.

It was also reported that Longden's son Vance, who has trained horses for McMahon, may succeed his father as trainer.

Golf Body Enjoys Black-Ink Season

The Victoria District Golf Committee, enjoying one of its most profitable seasons in recent years, has returned Harry Young as chairman for a 14th term.

Elections, a revision of the committee's terms of reference, and plans for the coming season highlighted the district body's annual general meeting Monday at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

The executive slate was returned by acclamation. In addition to Young, other officers returning are vice-chairman Viv Hicks, secretary Leo Derman and treasurer Bob Peters.

Committee chairman named were: Bill Wicken and Gary Small, juniors; Derek Rhys-Jones, buttons; Bob Bell, inter-club, and Joe Briggs, medals.

ONLY TWO LOSE

The committee, despite its continuing heavy outlay towards junior development, showed a profit of $1,372.70 for its 1970 operations. Only two of the seven district-operated tournaments showed a loss last season, apart from junior development.

Other terms of reference were updated with minor revisions.

The major change was altering the City Amateur from a 54-hole medal event to 36 holes. Golfers, in the past, objected to playing two rounds in one day when the event was played over 54 holes.

The committee also finalized plans for a special centennial year tournament to include men, women, boys and girls. The Centennial Tournament will wind up with club winners advancing to a final at Victoria Golf Club on June 20.

The committee also approved membership in the Victoria Sports Council.

Giants Face Spring Camp Without Mays

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (AP) — San Francisco Giants face the future—the next few days of spring training, anyway—without star outfielder Willie Mays.

Owner Horace Stoneham told a news conference here Tuesday that holdout Mays is remaining in Phoenix and that negotiations on his 1971 contract have broken down. Stoneham said he expects no change until Mays' financial mentor, former Giants manager Herman Franks, arrives Friday or Saturday from Salt Lake City where Franks is in business.

"I've talked twice with Willie within the last several days in Phoenix," said Stoneham, noting that Mays wants to be the highest paid baseball player and that the Giants "had a tough financial season in 1970" when they announced they lost $700,000.

"We represent 520 stockholders in the Giants. We can't run them off the deep end."

Labatts Capture Three-Point Edge

MORE SPORT ON PAGES 19, 20, 21

Greater bench strength played a part as Labatts rolled to a 63-60 win over league-champion Hotel Douglas in the first game of a two-game, total-point Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League playoff final Tuesday at Oak Bay High School.

Hotel Douglas, which had only six players to Lab's eight, took a narrow 33-32 lead at the intermission and Labs needed a rally to win after entering the final quarter with a 57-49 deficit.

Dave Wallace sparked the rally with 10 points in the final half to finish with a game total of 12 points. Tom Child led Lab scorers with 17 points.

John Lauvaas led Hotel Douglas with 17 points while Jack Lusk added 16 and Courtney Brousson chipped in 14.

Final game will be played on Thursday, beginning at 9:30 p.m. at Victoria High School.

B.C. Juniors Break Away From Western's Influence

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Junior Hockey League decided Tuesday to cut its ties with the Western Canada League and to work for a two-tiered junior A league within B.C.

BCJHL President Dr. Arnold Lowden of Penticton said following the league's annual meeting here that a working agreement for player trades and development and other considerations with the WCHL will be terminated April 1.

At the same time, the BCJHL will set up closer liaison with junior B clubs with the hopes of establishing a new junior A league sometime in the future, with the current A clubs moving to a major junior division.

The B.C. Amateur Hockey Association had urged the league to cut its ties with the WCHL.

At the same time, Dr. Lowden announced that the BCJHL quarter-finals, involving all eight teams in the reorganized Okanagan and Coastal divisions, will be played from March 22 to April 3.

VIKING VIEWS

By Mark Hume

For the first time in some weeks, the major athletic teams at the University of Victoria will be seeing action in town, rather than on foreign ground.

Fans will have the chance to choose between watching the varsity hockey, soccer, or rugby teams this weekend. All will be playing in Victoria.

The senior rugger squad will be clashing with the Norsemen on campus at 2:30 Sunday. Matches between these two are always rough and exciting, as Norsemen players try to prove that they deserve to be on the first team, and the Viking members attempt to prove they are worthy of their positions. What these matches often boil down to, is fifteen individual battles, with each player trying to show up his opposite number.

* * *

The Vikings were originally scheduled to meet Washington State this weekend, in a Northwest Intercollegiate Rugby Conference Leage game, but that match has now been postponed to March 21st.

Uvic, defending champions in the Northwest League, are unbeaten this season and are priming for their battle with the UBC Thunderbirds who are also undefeated.

Major weakness on the Vikings has been in their backfield, but it looks like a big step was taken to correct that last weekend when Dave Leonard was moved to the outside-centre position. Leonard, who had previously been playing wing, scored three tries from his new spot.

Leonard has "explosive power," said Viking manager Howard Gerwing, and should be able to provide the back line with the thrust that they have been lacking.

* * *

The soccer Vikings, who played to a scoreless draw with the league-leading Cosmos Royals last weekend, will meet the Road Runners at Heywood Park Saturday afternoon at 2:15.

Vikings seem to lack "goal-mouth finish," but at the same time they have an extremely tight defence. This perhaps explains why so many of their games this season have ended up as ties. If coach Wally Milligan can come up with a forward conbination which will be a little more cohesive, and can maintain the present quality of the defence, he'll have an unbeatable combination. He'll have to work fast, however, as the season is already reaching its final stages.

The varsity hockey squad has finished intercollegiate league, and will be re-entering play in the Victoria league this weekend.

Friday night at 8 they match skills with the Stockers at Esquimalt, and the following night meet the Chemainus team in Chemainus at 8:30.

* * *

The Vikings finished last in the intercollegiate league this year and one of the reasons for that placement was that they were competing in both the WCIAA and the Victoria leagues, often playing games back to back.

Many people said it was too much of a load for the team to carry, and apparently coach Howie Carty is in agreement with that charge.

Carty couldn't be reached for comment, but it's rumored that he said he won't coach if the Vikings enter both leagues again next season.

The major teams are at home this weekend, but many of the lesser ones will be out of town.

Women's curling and volleyball teams will be in Saskatoon over the weekend for WCIAA play, while the men's curling team will be at Winnipeg.

The cross-country team will be in Eugene, Oregon, and the JV basketball team will be in Vancouver to complete a best-of-three series against IGA. JVs won the first game last week.

Sawchuk Winner Of Patrick Award

NEW YORK (CP) — The late Terry Sawchuk, goalkeeper for five National Hockey League teams during 20 seasons, has been chosen a posthumous winner of the Lester Patrick Memorial Trophy for 1971.

Ranked at or near the top of the list of all-time great netminders, Sawchuk established numerous records, including most career shutouts (103), most regular-season games played (956) and most seasons played.

He will be honored during the sixth annual Lester Patrick award dinner here March 9. The Patrick Trophy is for outstanding service to hockey in the United States and is in memory of the former general manager and coach of New York Rangers.

William M. Jennings was announced a 1971 Patrick Trophy recipient last week. Jennings, president of the Rangers, is credited with being the person most responsible for the successful expansion of the NHL to seven additional U.S. cities since 1967.

Sawchuk, who died last May 31 at age 40, played his first full season with the Red Wings in 1950-51 and was Calder Memorial Trophy winner as NHL rookie of the year. He won the Vezina Trophy four times, three times with the Red Wings and the fourth as a Toronto Maple Leaf in 1965 when he shared the trophy with Johnny Bower. He was named to seven NHL All-Star teams.

Batting Helps West Indies To Test Draw

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — The first test cricket match between India and the West Indies ended in a draw Tuesday.

Scores were India 387, West Indies 217 and 385 for five.

The West Indies drew after a splendid batting display by Rohan Kanhai, skipper Garfield Sobers and Clive Lloyd which brought the home side back after being made to follow on with defeat a probability when play started on the final day at Sabina Park.

Kanhai, an 11th-hour selection on the West Indies team, batted brilliantly for an undefeated 158 which took him 388 minutes. With his 56 in the first innings he had a match-aggregate of 214.

Bias Odor Sensed Near Skate Judges

LYONS, France (CP) — The Russians seemed certain to win their first gold medal of the world figure skating championships and possibly a silver one as well tonight in the pairs competition.

The Russians also held a slight lead in the dance event and Czechoslovakia the top spot in the men's singles. The women's singles is still to come.

All nine judges picked Ludmila Smirnova and Andrei Suraikin of Russia for first place after the compulsory school figures were completed Tuesday night, giving them 104.2 judging points. The final free-skating phase is on tonight.

Irini Rudnina and Sergei Ulanov, defending champions and winners of the recent European championship, were placed second by each judge and given 102.6 points. Joe Starbuck and Ken Shelley of the United States were third with 99 points.

Sandra and Val Bezic of Toronto were ninth among the 18 couples competing and had 93.1 points. The young brother and sister—Sandra is 14 and Val 18—were 14th in their initial try at the title last year.

While the judging picture was clear-cut in the pairs, such was not the case in the dance where all four East-Bloc judges backed the Russians, three of the five Western judges picked the Americans for first, the French judge split his vote and the West German picked his own country's pair.

Lind and Soper in 11th Position

Ludmila Pachomova and Alexander Gorshkov of Russia took the lead Tuesday night in the dance after the first two compulsory dances with 100.4 points. Judy Schwomeyer and Jim Saldky of the United States were tied for second with Angelika and Erich Buck of West Germany with 99.9 points.

The Canadian dancers, Louise Lind and Barry Soper of Vancouver, stood 11th with 84.1 judging points. The 22-year-old Canadians are competing in the world championships for the first time and have said they would consider a final placing of 15th a good showing and 10th spot a "much-desired miracle."

Cranston's Figures 'Not That Bad'

Prior to this first event in the five-day skating competition, Cranston had been mentioned as a favorite for men's honors, along with Nepela and the man who beat the Canadian for the North American title, John Petkevich of the United States.

Petkevich ended the first four figures in fifth position. Sergei Chetveruhin of Russia was third and Jan Hoffmann of East Germany fourth.

The placings for the top five positions remained unchanged after the fifth and sixth figures were skated today.

Nepela clung to first place with 1,150.5 points while Pera scored 1,149.7. The Czech also had the higher placing in ordinals—13 to Pera's 15. Chetveruhin was third with 1,099.3 and 28 ordinals, Hoffmann fourth with 1,066.7 and 38 and Petkevich fifth with 1,044.9 and 43.5.

Cranston moved up to 15th place with 954.1 points.

The Canadian said five of the nine judges in his classification were from Iron Curtain countries and none from Canada.

He said he didn't want to indulge in "sour grapes" but "I know my figures weren't that bad."

'As If Someone Hit Me on the Head'

Today's experience left him so disheartened that he said he is pondering whether to continue in future competitions on the world level. "It's too difficult and too much," he remarked.

But Cranston insisted that he's not giving up on the present contest.

"If I free-skate well, I think I'll get something," he said in expressing his hopes for a final place among the top 10.

"I'm walking around now as if someone hit me over the head."

Cranston, ranked behind women's singles star Karen Magnussen of Vancouver among top Canadian hopes at the current championships, appeared to do less than well in the all-important task of tracing out his initial figures before proceeding with the later stages of his compulsories.

The Lyons debut of the 18-year-old Miss Magnussen has been preceded here and elsewhere in Europe by much press publicity which may create for her a sympathetic spectator reaction to her efforts.

The final two compulsory figures for the men also will be skated today.

Ondrej Nepela of Czechoslovakia was leading after four figures with Patrick Pera of France second.

The men's free skating, deciding the title, will be held Thursday night.

The two Europeans were the star performers in four rounds of compulsory figures which left Toller Cranston of Lachine, Que., far behind in 16th place among 22 starters.

Cranston, who trains in Toronto, ended his Tuesday performance with 573.7 points, compared with 698.1 for Nepela and 695.5 for Pera.

Bear, Jonathan Win Main Bouts

Steven Little Bear bounced Johnny Quinn and Don Leo Jonathan tumbled Angelo Mosca in the double main event of a professional wrestling card Tuesday night at Memorial Arena.

In other bouts, Dean Higuchi and Duncan McTavish teamed up to outgrapple Wolfman Gorky and Thunderbolt Cannon in a tag-team tussle while Pancho Lopez recorded a victory over Jack Bence.

Something for Everybody at Boat Show

Two of the biggest boating events of the year will hit the start line Friday, one at Vancouver and the other in New Zealand.

The one in Vancouver, of course, is the annual Vancouver boat show, due to run through until March 7 and expected to draw more than 150,000 visitors before it ends.

The New Zealand event is the annual One Ton Cup contest which will see 16 yachts from nine countries, including Canada, competing for what has become one of the most coveted yachting trophies in the world.

J. Beatson of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club and two other Canadians will be racing Mustang, which they've chartered from New Zealand but which is one of the boats designed by the Canadian firm of Cuthbertson and Cassian.

Friday's race will be a 150-mile run, and will be followed by a 30-mile Olympic course race March 1, a 300-mile offshore race that begins the next day, and another 30-mile Olympic course sailout March 7.

New Zealand's Chris Bouzaid won last year's series sailed off Heligoland, wrestling the laurels away from Germany's H. Beilken, who won the previous two years. Beilken, like Bouzaid, will be back to try again for top spot.

There will also be entries from Australia, Switzerland, Hong Kong, Italy, Sweden and Britain.

* * *

Even those who have difficulty sorting port from starboard should enjoy the boat show. Pint-sized fishermen will be able to try their hand at two ponds, each stocked with trout up to two feet in length. There's a display of northern fur-bearing animals and a "hot boat" area, reigned over by last year's champion hydroplane, Miss Budweiser.

Sailing enthusiasts will be the "in" people, with the whole of the agrodome turned over to sailboats and sailing equipment. There'll be all types of craft, ranging from the smallest dinghy to Sparkman and Stephens' Hughes 48.

In other PNE buildings a total of 350 firms will be showing the latest in power boats, marine gear, trailers and campers.

The show will be open 6 to 10:30 p.m. each weeknight, from 1 to 10:30 p.m. Saturdays, and 1 to 6 p.m. Sundays.

* * *

Royal Vic. sailor Denny Coverdale is chairman of the second open invitational winter regatta to be hosted from the club.

It will take place in waters off Sidney March 6 and 7, with one race being sailed on the Saturday and two on the Sunday. Any keel boat can be entered, whether her skipper is a member of a yacht club or not. Indications are that it will be a massive turnout. Already 21 Turkey Head Sailing Association skippers have agreed to go up to Sidney for the event.

Entry forms, which can be had by phoning Denny at 479-5775 or calling in at Bosun's Locker on Johnson, should be completed and handed in at the club by March 4.

Winter racing was almost a complete washout Sunday for both THSA and Royal Vic. keel boat competition.

Twenty-seven THSA boats tried to make an around-Discovery Island course. Only two were able to finish, Ed Cushing's Shamrock, who won, and Ted Bowers' Hakai.

Nineteen Royal Vic. boats, competing in a 11-mile race off Sidney all failed to finish within the time limit because of the strong adverse tide and lack of wind.

* * *

Frostbite sailors at Cadboro Bay sailed the final races of their third winter series Saturday.

Rocky Rochfort came first in Davidson competition, followed by John Malleson and Ted Bowers. Series winners in Davidsons are Rick McBride, Ted Bowers, Humphrey Golby and John Malleson.

Jim Williams was Saturday's over-all winner in El Toro racing and also won the series. Finishing behind him Saturday were John Hall, Tim Roots and Mike Williams. Jim's son, Mike, also came second behind his father in the series, being trailed by John Hall and Tim Roots.

Doug Beer was top OK dinghy sailer Saturday. Behind him came Philip Huggett, Al McGillivray and Bruce Smith.

Doug Taylor-Lee won Saturday's Fireball competition and earned first place in the series. Second in the series was Dave Richardson.

STICK-THROWING ALL-STAR SUSPENDED

RED DEER (CP) — Graham Parsons, goaltender for Ponoka Stampeders, has been suspended for the remainder of the season and Don Hunt, coach of Edmonton Movers, was fined $25 by the Alberta Junior Hockey League.

Parsons, named to the league's first all-star team, was suspended following a game Sunday in Lethbridge when he threw his stick into the crowd, allegedly injuring a spectator.

Hunt's fine came after a game in Ponoka Feb. 11 when he left the players' bench and had an altercation with a spectator.

Both clubs have only two games remaining in the regular schedule and have been eliminated from league playoffs which start March 6.

Hopes Revived By Arnie's Army

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—Everyone seems to be asking "Can Arnie do it?" in the 53rd Professional Golfers' Association Championship.

Arnold Palmer's victory in the Bob Hope Classic 10 days ago rekindled the blaze under his all-volunteer Arnie's Army.

Those adoring thousands are regrouping with new hope that "The Man" might finally capture the only major title that has eluded him.

"Winning the Hope Classic relieved some of the pressure," Palmer said Tuesday. "Coming into the PGA — which I've never taken — would have been tough if I hadn't won anything for 14 months."

MODEL CONDITION

Palmer's body, lean and tanned, is a model for men of age 41. Deep inside, though, it has to be churning with anticipation of another shot at that ever-elusive PGA crown.

"I've been second in the PGA three times," he said. "It's no secret how badly I want it."

The 72-hole shootout begins Thursday on the dollar-green East course at PGA National Golf Club, a layout of 7096 yards.

A triumph means Arnold finally would complete the Grand Slam of the world's four top pro events.

Jack Nicklaus has three Masters titles, two U.S. Opens and two British Opens in addition to a lone PGA crown.

If Palmer wins, he joins previous "Slammers" Nicklaus, Gary Player, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen. Sarazen, PGA winner in 1922, is in the field 49 years later and will tee it up Thursday wearing his traditional knickerbocker trousers.

14TH ATTEMPT

Palmer shot rounds of 67-71-66-68-70 for a 90-hole total of 342 in the Hope Classic, played on four desert courses in Palm Springs, Calif., but had to run in a birdie putt to whip Ray Floyd in a playoff.

Once again, he had disproved the "Arnold is dead" theory, just in time for the 14th crack at the PGA championship.

Palmer was second in 1964, 1968 and again last year at Tulsa. In 13 appearances, the jet-set millionaire from Pennsylvania has been in the top 10 six times. He failed to win in '64 despite rounds of 68-68-69-69 for a sizzling 274 total.

Victoria Juniors Trailing

VANCOUVER — UBC Jayvees took a one-game lead in the best-of-three junior women's basketball final by scoring a 62-45 Sunday win over First United of Victoria.

Second game of the series will be played in Victoria on Saturday night.

Loss of scoring-star Trish Hadfield with eight minutes left proved to be fatal for the defending champions.

The Islanders, B.C. champions for the past three years, had fought their way to within one point when Miss Hadfield fouled out. She had the game high of 24 points and First United couldn't continue the rally without her.

Linda Moffat was high for the winners, who had a 29-18 lead at half time. She scored 21 points.

UBC JAYVEES (62): Pat McGuire 6, Lynn Wells 9, Janice Currie, Pat Robinson 3, Trish Yard 6, June Ball 7, Elaine Owen 2, Linda Moffat 21, Lynn McCoullough 6, Jacquie Snow, June Hanemeyer 2.

FIRST UNITED (45): Ann McKeachie 3, Trish Hadfield 24, Gail Piapelli 2, Judy Pearson 2, Barb Hallberg 1, Carol Morissey 3, Lynette Wren 3, Sharon Kinghorn 2, Margo Robbie, Lydia Gledhil 4.

Penny May Gets Record

University of Victoria's Penny May was unfortunately deprived of a Canadian record of 7.1 seconds for the 50 metre hurdles by a typographical error in the Times Monday. Miss May in winning the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association hurdles event at Vancouver Sunday ran the distance in 7.1, not 7.2, as announced in the Times.

Miss May's time equals the Canadian Open, and the B.C. Open marks and is a new Canadian junior, B.C. Native and WCIAA record. On Saturday, Seattle's Pat Johnson won the Achilles 50-metre hurdles in 7.1 seconds. Miss May and Jill Pelland were second on Saturday in 7.2. Miss Pelland's time was a B.C. and Canadian native juvenile record.

Canada in Group With Soviet Club

SAO PAULO, Brazil (Reuter) — World champion Russia was drawn Monday in the same group as Argentina, Canada and Cuba for the women's world basketball championships starting May 15.

Draw for the championships, which are held every four years, is: Group A—Soviet Union, Argentina, Canada, Cuba; Group B—South Korea, France, Ecuador, United States; Group C—Czechoslovakia, Japan, Madascar, Australia.

Braves Clinch Playoff Berth

Belmont Braves clinched a berth in the Vancouver Island playoffs by bouncing host Mount View Hornets 70-40 in an Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League game on Tuesday night.

Victory also kept alive Belmont's hopes of tying Victoria Totems for the league championship. Belmont is now two points behind leading Totems, and each club has one game remaining in the regular schedule.

Totems tackle Mount Douglas Rams in their final game while Belmont meets Reynolds, the other club with a chance to catch Totems.

The top four teams from the Inter-High School League advance to the Island tournament.

Jack Munch and Lee Edmondson each fired 15 points to pace Braves. Graham Thompson led Hornets with 14 points, one more than the total accumulated by clubmate Vic Teng.

Pioneer Family Lives It Up For B.C.'s Centennial Year

By DONNA CLEMENTS

SALTAIR — For Walter Emblem of Saltair, B.C.'s centennial year is a time of rare anniversaries.

On Thursday, he will help celebrate his mother's 100th birthday.

In April, he will celebrate his 50th wedding anniversary with his wife Gladys, 70.

In June, he will celebrate his 75th birthday.

Emblem, who was born and raised in the central Vancouver Island area, said Tuesday "it is quite a thrill to be celebrating centennial year with my mother Edith. I guess the best part is to have my mother living this long and still having all of her faculties so she can celebrate, too."

Emblem said his family, along with many other relatives, will help his mother celebrate her centenary at the Nightingale Rest Home in Nanaimo.

He said he has contacted several people in an attempt to find if there are other similar parent-child combinations who will be celebrating B.C.'s birthday together.

"I can't find any yet."

Emblem attributes his long life and good health to his mother, who had nine children (six are still alive).

"She had a very hard and active life and is still very active."

Mrs. Emblem has 17 grandchildren, and 32 great grandchildren. Her oldest grandchild is 50 while the oldest great-grandchild is 21.

Youbou Graveyard Shift Shut

YOUBOU — More than 70 men will be put our of work when British Columbia Forest Products Youbou sawmill division shuts down its graveyard shift on March 5.

This is the second major cutback in two weeks by BCFP when it closed its Point Ellice sawmill in Victoria on Feb. 12, laying off 130 workers.

The cutbacks follow BCFP's report that its profits fell 85 per cent in 1970.

Youbou manager Jim Warr said today that the graveyard shift, operating steadily for the past three years, is being shutdown due the continued depressed lumber market, rising costs of supplies and freight and a shortage of logs in Cowichan Lake.

Warr stressed that the company is not "too optimistic that the situation is going to improve this year. It is for an indefinite period but we are not holding out too much hope that this is going to be a short-term thing and the log situation is going to correct itself."

The mill is consuming logs faster than BCFP's Caycuse logging division can put them into the Lake, Warr said.

Warr said the log shortage is caused by the heavy snowfall this winter which has interfered with logging operations.

This is the first slump in the high production level the Youbou mill has been operating at in the past four years, he said.

Warr said after the shutdown of the graveyard shift there will still be 500 employees working at the company's sawmill and veneer plant plus 235 on logging operations.

The mill was also forced to lay off 16 men from their graveyard shift in the veneer plant Monday due to the Teamsters strike.

Warr said the shift has been shutdown temporarily because "everything goes out of here okay but it is held up in other places."

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s Chemainus sawmill division has reported everything is running as usual.

Island Pipeline Under Study

Engineering studies for a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island are being conducted, Premier Bennett told the legislature Tuesday.

In response to a question by Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat), Bennett said he believed natural gas ought to be used to help meet power requirements on the island.

Bennett said he was making no promise and would not identify who is doing the studies. But he said the pipeline may run from Powell River to an undetermined point on northern Vancouver Island.

The government's throne speech in 1969 noted that planning for a gas pipeline to the island was well advanced.

Bennett said the island is a "power shortage area," and in response to Strachan's question about his current feelings about nuclear power for the island, Bennett said he was still against it.

This should not prevent B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum from stating his own opinions, Bennett said. Shrum favors a nuclear power plant on Vancouver Island.

Strachan said natural gas could be used 5 or 6 times more on the island than in northern B.C. under present development levels.

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) asked Bennett to state what the province's power policy is for the future.

Bennett said the B.C. energy board is studying power needs for the next 15 years, and he promised that no brownouts or blackouts will occur.

'Sausage' Schools Proving a Headache

DUNCAN — Development of large elementary schools in thickly populated areas and a new type of construction were urged Monday by Cowichan School District superintendent Eric Lewis.

Lewis told board members that small, scattered schools throughout the district are proving a headache.

Larger elementary schools in centres of the greatest population would help eliminate the district's transportation problems plus the difficulty in adding to existing buildings.

The procedure currently produces "an undesirable mixture of old and new and results in long, sausage-like structures," Lewis said.

"Scattered schools are costly in both administration and maintenance."

To avoid the "long sausage-like structures," Lewis recommended that the board consider construction of four-room pods, rather than the single unit portable, which has been used extensively in the past. He suggested that three of these pods be planned for September construction.

The pods, each costing $100,000, would be located at Alexander, Bench and Koksilah Elementary schools.

BOXER'S FRIEND FACES CHARGE

NANAIMO (CP) — Robert Meyer, 28, of Torrance, Calif., was charged with assaulting a steward aboard the British Columbia ferry Queen of Nanaimo Tuesday.

Police said Meyer, one of two men travelling with heavyweight boxer Jerry Quarry, pleaded not guilty and was remanded to March 15 on $500 bail.

Stewart Dudley Christian suffered cuts around his eye and nose in the incident which occurred while the ferry was en route to Departure Bay.

Leadership once again...

Standard introduces the only unleaded gasoline with F-310*

Standard Oil Company — a leader for many years in the marketing of advanced petroleum products — now announces the introduction of Chevron Unleaded, the only unleaded gasoline with F-310.

Up to now lead has been used in the gasolines of all major oil companies to prevent engine "knock" and most of the cars on the road in British Columbia today still need leaded gasoline. But tomorrow's cars, starting with some 1971 models, will have engines designed to operate on unleaded gasolines. Within a few years many cars will be in this category.

Why this fundamental change in gasoline? According to automobile manufacturers, unleaded gasoline will be required for the advanced exhaust control devices now in the development stage for use on production models in the near future.

Chevron Unleaded is being introduced to keep pace with this development. It will meet the demands of those 1971 cars and succeeding models designed to operate on unleaded gasoline — and it can be used in some pre-1971 cars which are able to operate on a lower-octane fuel.

Chevron Unleaded is now available at conveniently located Greater Vancouver and Victoria Standard Stations and Independent Chevron Dealers displaying the "Chevron Unleaded" sign.

It is the only unleaded gasoline which includes the benefits of F-310.

History Repeated, Club Record Shows

By ELIZABETH FORBES

There's an old belief that history repeats itself, said Mrs. Charles (Bessie) Smith when she spoke at a weekend gathering arranged to mark the 50th anniversary of the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club. And she is certain this is a truth.

Delving back into carefully preserved records of the club she had found amazing similarities in the concerns and the efforts for change, then and now.

Forbes

In 1921, the year the club was organized by Miss Lottie Bowron under the name of Kumtuks, a first minute book records that "many members deplored the ill effects of salacious and sensational films upon the coming generation."

The club sent a petition to the provincial government in 1923, asking that the stately timber along the Island Highway be preserved. It also requested that a west coast road be constructed. "We haven't got it yet!" said Mrs. Smith.

★ ★ ★

At the same time a letter was sent to the mayor and council of Victoria, deploring the condition of the beaches.

Four years later, in 1927, the chairman of the Minimum Wage Board, in speaking to the club, stated that women employees showed reluctance to report alleged or real infractions.

"It's the same problem that exists today with our Equal Pay Act."

There were 24 members on the Kumtuks charter and programs they followed "would almost make your head spin."

They made a list of topics for talks and they drew lots for them, with each member making one speech during the club year. They studied problems of the day, passed resolutions and presented well-documented briefs and petitions. They joined in community activities, formed an orchestra and a glee club, a drama club and a literary group and they put on socials and entertainments.

In 1923 they honored the late Nancy Hodges (when she was still women's editor of this newspaper) as Queen of the Service Clubs and she rode in the May 24 parade that year in a decorated Model "T".

★ ★ ★

Miss Bowron was named the first president of Kumtuks and in her inaugural address she pinpointed the chief reason for the club's being:

It was "to educate members in public affairs, so that, as intelligent women with the vote, we might know how to properly play our part in the life of Canada—and that we might not only know how, but play it."

Forty years later (in 1961) with the same objectives in mind, the club sparked formation of the Association of Women Electors of Greater Victoria.

Kumtuks became the Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club in September, 1930, and also in that year a charter member of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Concern of Grace MacInnis, member of Parliament for Vancouver-Kingsway, that the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, tabled in Parliament on Dec. 7, will not be given the priority it needs, is shared by all responsible women across Canada.

They see the need for a strong and sustained campaign to ensure the success of the report.

★ ★ ★

As a start, a "write-in" campaign is suggested. If you are sincerely interested, do get a letter off to the prime minister, House of Commons, Ottawa, urging that a minister of the cabinet be designated to consider the report as a whole and assign the responsibility for legislative action to the appropriate departments of government. Also urging that there be legislation on the report this session.

Write to your member(s) of Parliament, too.

Mrs. MacInnis is correct when she says there is absolute necessity of ACTION NOW. Otherwise there is grave danger that this outstanding report will slip into one of those forgotten filing cabinet drawers and be lost.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1971 —PAGE 25

DEAR OLD FRANK

Hero Re-Visited —Something Gone

By Jack Scott

Browsing yesterday in Poor Richard's Bookshop my beady little eyes fell upon a 1900 edition of Frank Merriwell's Shrewdness or Brain and Brawn by Burt L. Standish. Before Howard Kessler, your genial prop., could brace himself for the customary haggling I'd closed the deal for a solitary buck and was out and sprinting down Fort Street.

Oddly enough, though they're in short supply, the Merriwell books aren't collectors' items like the Horatio Alger classics. What's more, this particular copy was showing its great age of 71 years. But I can't remember being happier about an unexpected find.

★ ★ ★

As usual, the knowledgeable Kessler had all sorts of fascinating information about the author. In real life, it seems, Standish was Gilbert Patten, a handsome six-footer born in Maine in 1866. He was just 17 when he sold his first piece to Erastus Beadle, king of the dime novel game, for a cool six dollars and even in the years of his fame, when his books were selling at a rate of 135,000 copies a week, he seldom made more than $250 for a story.

Scott

Like Horatio, Gilbert was a man with an incredible output that averaged 20,000 words a week and though he was a suffocating moralist in print, his private life, like Alger's, was unorthodox. He was a militant Fabian Socialist and twice divorced, which may account for the fact that when Franklin P. Adams, the New York Post columnist, rediscovered him at the age of 75 he was stoney broke.

The Frank Merriwell series began when Standish was 30. Over the next 18 years he wrote no less than 208 Merriwell dime novels that sold more than 125 million copies to people like Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, President Woodrow Wilson and me.

Frank was the super-hero of all juvenile literature, a Yale man who "had a body like Tarzan and a head like Einstein" and a heart of purest gold and, not to put too fine a point on it, I worshipped him, which may account for the fact that I'm such a red-blooded, clean-cut boy today.

Just having the book in my hot hand brought back vivid memories of the place where I used to read after school and through the long summer days. An old maple tree stood by the back of the house my family lived in then. You climbed up through the branches and then stepped across to the roof where its slope was gentle. You could lie on your stomach with the sun filtering through the green leaves and read all day and your mother would never know where you were.

★ ★ ★

Perhaps I should have left it at that and not pressed my luck by re-reading the book. Mind you, Standish was a far better writer than Horatio (it would be hard not to be), but in "Frank Merriwell's Shrewdness" he doesn't exactly seem to stake a claim to immortality.

I was alternately amused and nostalgic. On Page 60, where Frank is surrounded by an ugly mob of "townies" and asked to identify himself, he squares his preposterous shoulders and announces in ringing tones, "I am Frank Merriwell of Yale, captain of the Yale football eleven, that has come here to play Princeton in the big game today!" There is a great murmur and respectful falling-back by the crowd, but somehow it didn't move me as it ohce did.

Back there when the world was young, up under the canopy of the maple leaves, that line would have filled me with deep emotion. I would hear a triumphant tar-a-ta-tar-a-ta of trumpets and my stomach would be a jelly of love and admiration. Now, even the weight of the nostalgia couldn't keep a laugh in its respectful place.

I must confess I was amused, too, on Page 82, when Frank, after getting up from his death-bed, kicked the winning goal for Yale. Some kick it was, too. There was a wind of hurricane intensity, you see, and Frank had to kick away from the goal posts to score.

"Such a kick for goal has seldom been seen on any field," the narrative goes, somewhat redundantly. "The time-keeper's whistle blew, but the ball was over and beyond the goal posts before the blast cut the air and Frank Merriwell's kick had won the game for Yale in the very last second of the time remaining before the end of the second half of the game!"

★ ★ ★

Back when the world was young it would have seemed the most natural thing in the world, expected, eagerly anticipated, yet as exciting as anything that had ever happened and causing an internal whoop of joy. Now it could only be a whoop of laughter.

If nothing else, re-reading that old, well-loved book was an invitation to some long, sombre reflection on what happens to a boy who becomes a man.

The boy has something, it came to me, that is forever lost in his later years, the ability to believe in miracles, the pure, burning faith in the super-hero.

I wish I had some of that faith in me now, as I had it in me when I scaled the old maple tree. I wish I could believe in a Frank Merriwell, wish I had that magnificent confidence that the goal was going to be kicked against the wind of the hurricane in the last second of the game to win it all for Yale and for me.

A Footnote

On Feb. 8 in this corner I announced that "within the next day or two," Lorraine, the wife of George Royal Oake IV, our city editor, would give birth to a daughter weighing eight pounds, three ounces.

The baby was born yesterday at 7:14 p.m. in St. Joseph's Hospital, 15 days after my announcement.

The baby did not weigh eight pounds, three ounces. The baby weighed nine pounds, three and-a-half ounces.

The baby was not a daughter. The baby was a son to be called George Royal Oake V.

Readers now wishing further predictions, prophecies or forecasts are asked to call to make private appointments.

ALTAR MAY GO IN CATHEDRAL'S CENTRE

St. Andrew's Renovation Stalled By Opposition in Parish Ranks

St. Andrew's

By STEPHEN BROWN

Opposition by some parish members has stalled a proposed $48,000 interior renovation in St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral that would move the altar from the sanctuary to the centre of the church.

"We will probably sit tight for awhile," Father Richard Caldwell of the cathedral told the Times.

He was replying to charges by parishioner Daniel Sterling, of 363 Davida, who said renovation would have been approved for a March start at a meeting of the parish board three weeks ago had not there been so many opponents present.

'They Threw Altar Out in the Alley And a Hermit Cut It into Trinkets'

Caldwell said "it doesn't seem suitable to go ahead at this time," mainly because the 80-year-old cathedral has more urgent priorities, such as new roofing, heating and window caulking.

"I understand what they're doing," Sterling said. "They're biding their time."

The plan, in line with modern liturgical practices in many Roman Catholic churches, involves moving the altar to the spot where the nave and transepts cross and filling the sanctuary with pews facing toward the main doors of the cathedral.

Sterling is opposed to it on both sentimental — "it sounds like a round-table conference" — and financial grounds.

"They had the architect (John A. Di Castri) at that meeting and somebody asked him how much all this would cost. When he said $48,000, people just about went through the floor.

"Forty thousand bucks is chicken feed in some places but to a Catholic congregation that's a lot of money.

"We've already got $80,000 debt. That works out to $144 in interest alone that we owe for every Sunday we go to church."

●

"If they've got $48,000 to spend, they should give it to the Indians — we stole their land to start with."

He said more than 300 people signed a petition a year ago asking that no changes be made to the cathedral unless approved by the parishioners. One of the things the petition specified not be changed was the location of the altar.

"Do we have to go through this every year?" Sterling asked.

Caldwell and Monsignor Michael O'Connell, rector, said the petition was not felt to be a "legitimate expression of opinion," because many of the people who signed it were Catholics from other parishes than St. Andrew's.

"Many Catholics from other parishes come to St. Andrew's from time to time and are not aware of the talks (on proposed changes) that are going on," said O'Connell.

●

He said Sterling is "raising a phoney issue" because the final decision will be made by a general meeting of the whole parish, not by the parish board, though the board does make a recommendation. "It's all going to be done democratically."

Sterling said "the cathedral doesn't belong to the parish board. They're just trustees — and judging from their past performance they're not doing a very good job."

He said the cathedral interior used to have "a very inspirational character — the right paintings, statues and altars.

"Then someone took the pope's call for simplicity too far — they threw the altar out in the alley and a hermit from Campbell River cut it up into trinkets.

"We Catholics paid between five and seven thousand dollars for that altar. We just don't have that kind of money to throw away."

Sterling is also still mad about the board's decision to paint over "with an awful flat paint" the dark oak panelling around the sanctuary, and to paint over some wall murals, copies of famous paintings "that took someone from St. Ann's one year to paint."

He said the cost of the cathedral projects "is scaring people away" from the church.

●

"We're a very patient people. We don't want to go against our pope, our clergy, our bishop. But we've got to live within our means."

Asked if the alterations could be done by volunteer labor from the parish, Caldwell said the costliest items in the renovation project — a new lighting system and carpeting — could not.

The new lighting alone would account for nearly $20,000 of the total.

"Any parish is going to be in debt to a certain extent," he said. "It will be largely up to the people whether they can afford an extra $48,000."

Revolt Spreads On Health Costs

School boards continued their revolt over public health costs Tuesday night and the chairman of Greater Victoria's health board said today he has "every hope" there will be a new regional deal by spring.

Frank Waring, the Saanich alderman who has just taken the chair of the metro health board, admitted financing of the board's activities is "a hodgepodge" but doubted Health Minister Ralph Loffmark would apply himself to resolving it before the end of the current legislative sitting.

A year ago almost to the day Loffmark stood in the house to announce a new regional system for administering public health services throughout the province was pending. This was sufficient to stop Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay from pulling out of the metro health board over what they consider an inequitable financing formula.

SOOKE REJECTION

Now a new revolt has blossomed, this time among area school boards who last year contributed about $178,000, a third of the health board's budget.

Sooke school district trustees decided Tuesday night to "reject" their share of the health board's new budget. They want more information on current and future health care costs.

At the Saanich school board meeting Monday night, trustees discussing the same question decided to ask the department of education to stop assessing school boards for this sort of public service. They want to be left to spend their budget on education.

NEW DEAL SOUGHT

And two weeks ago Dr. Philip Ney, representative of the Greater Victoria school board on the health board, told the latter that his school board wants a new deal, a contract with the health board which will specify services to be provided and their cost.

This school board's complaint underlines one of the two major problems surrounding the health board's operation in recent years:

● Lack of staff.

● A complicated financing formula which Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt argue has them paying far more than their share.

WARING
. . . 'hodgepodge'

The Greater Victoria school board says it is not getting the health services it's entitled to, such things as the services of a speech therapist, audiologist, psychologists and psychiatrist.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the board's senior medical health officer, has pointed out repeatedly in recent years that lack of funds to hire the necessary staff has hamstrung the operation.

The board's staff is supposed to cover an area reaching from the Gulf Islands to Port Renfrew, meaning a population of close to 200,000, including about 40,000 school children.

It provides services in a wide variety of areas, including communiciable disease control, nursing, pre-natal and post-natal care, health clinics for the elderly, food, water and hospital inspections, lab analyses and prisoner medical exams.

INDESCRIBABLE

The board's operation is financed by a practically indescribable grant structure which has funds coming from the federal and provincial governments as well as ratepayers, the latter on different contribution scales.

The latest complaints from the Greater Victoria school board prompted Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock to propose recently that the city, Oak Bay and Esquimalt again pull out of the health board.

The board is composed of representatives from these three municipalities plus Saanich, Central Saanich, North Saanich, Sidney and the four area school boards.

LONG PROPOSED

Waring said today that in his view the solution is to do what has been long proposed, put the health board's operation under the jurisdiction of the Capital Regional Board.

The provincial government should set out a complete policy on the service required, then make it financially possible to hire the staff needed.

Waring said the health board has written the government, requesting a meeting with Loffmark, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Education Minister Donald Brothers.

LAYOFFS AVERTED

B.C. Hydro has worked out an arrangement with the Amalgamated Transit Union to avoid any layoffs at this time, a spokesman for the crown corporation said Tuesday.

A large percentage of the drivers will take their holidays early, the spokesman said. This will mean fewer temporary employees will be hired for sightseeing this summer and the manpower situation will be reviewed in the fall.

Crime Climb Continues With 5,853 'Code' Cases

Crime in Victoria rose by 21.8 per cent during 1970, according to figures released Tuesday by the Victoria Police Commission.

The 1970 crime statistics show there were 5,853 Criminal Code cases reported during the year, compared with 4,813 in 1969.

The increase rate of 21.8 per cent compares with a figure of 36.2 the year before, which was the highest in the last five years. The rate of increase during 1968 was 6.2 per cent, and in 1967, 5.6 per cent.

THEFTS INCREASE

Comparisons show that while most Criminal Code offences increased in 1970, the percentage of cases "cleared" fell. Cleared cases refers to those in which charges were laid.

The number of cases cleared in 1970 was 32.3 per cent of the number of offences, while in 1969 the figure was 38 per cent.

TWO MURDERS

Value of stolen property reported was $261,902 in 1970, compared with $219,599 in 1969. Property recovered in 1970 was worth $39,501, compared with $52,204 in 1969.

Theft of goods under a value of $50 continued as the most common offence. There were 1,547 cases reported in 1970 and 461 were cleared. In 1969 the reported cases numbered 1,099 and 309 were cleared. The 1970 clearing record was better — 30 per cent to 1969's 28 per cent.

In 1969 two murders were reported and one was cleared. In 1970, two were reported and three were cleared. Rape cases reported in 1969 and 1970 were even at eight, but four were cleared in 1969 and one was cleared in 1970.

Breaking and entering was the second highest offence, with 1,026 cases reported, 119 cleared, or 11.6 per cent. In 1969, 806 cases were reported, 188 cleared or 23 per cent.

SEX OFFENCES

Ten sex offences other than rape were reported in 1970, one cleared, or 10 per cent. In 1969, of the 12 cases reported, eight were cleared, or 66 per cent.

Fraud cases increased from 601 to 701. The clearing rated dropped from 52 per cent to 39 per cent.

The number of suicides rose from 13 to 15, accidental deaths went from 8 to 19.

Q. Would you please explain how our lieutenant-governors are chosen and also when the present term of office expires?—AJH.

A. The lieutenant-governor is chosen by the federal cabinet. The normal term is five years and B.C. Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson was appointed in 1968.

Q. Can you tell me where Bill Wilson, the co-founder of Alcoholics Anonymous who died recently, was born? What nationality was he? A.C.

A. William G. Wilson was born in the small Vermont town of East Dorset. He was an American citizen. A Wall Street stockbroker, he was ruined by the Depression and became an alcoholic. He and a doctor, who examined him in Akron, Ohio, founded A.A. in 1935.

Q. Could you give me the addresses of the actors Alec Guinness and George C. Scott?—J.C.

A. Alec Guinness lives at Kettlebrook Meadows, Steep Marsh, Petersfield, Hampshire, England. We can find no address for George C. Scott.

IN THE YEARS WHEN A father can get away with it I used to subject my son to all manner of bilge and quack-quack on any number of subjects. One of these was male garb.

It should be decently unobtrusive, I would tell him, and even a touch conservative. No loud ties. Dark suit and black shoes after 6 p.m. And, naturally, a white shirt.

Ron would listen politely, going on with whatever he happened to be doing. Sometimes he and his mother would trade indulgent smiles.

As time passed, Ron escaped these well-intended homilies by growing up. Also, I kept running into situations that niggled at my convictions.

There was, for example, a party we went to not so long ago. My dear one splurged on a pant suit for the occasion. She looked like a million bucks. I wore a dark suit, white shirt, discreet tie and black shoes, and felt kind of stuffy.

Men's styles were changing for the better, Win observed as we drove home, and had I noticed the smartly turned-out guest in the red shirt?

Sure I'd noticed him, and even envied him a trifle.

"I'm not suggesting you copy him," Win said, "only next time you buy new clothes, it mightn't hurt to loosen up a bit."

Come to think of it, I was in line for some replacements. A sport jacket, maybe, since even the sturdiest of tweed doesn't resist time and abrasion forever. A pair of slacks. Possibly a shirt with the merest suggestion of a stripe, and a modestly wide tie of the quieter sort.

I told Ron about this decision. He grinned. "Going to shake it up a little?" he asked. "How about something daring this time, like no cuffs on the pants?"

He was wearing a striped suit of a greenish cast, a purple shirt, and a wide tie of considerable authority. It was an outfit that would once have set me squawking. But on him it looked good.

"I'll do better than that," I told him. "Come on downtown and do the picking for me. I'm in your hands."

"You're on," he said. "We can't expect miracles, but by the time Ralph and Kerry get through with you, you'll hardly know yourself."

He went off, whistling, to alert Ralph and Kerry at the store where he got the suit.

"They're expecting a new shipment in," he reported back, after a phone call punctuated by one hearty laugh and several chuckles. "We'll go down Saturday morning."

Last Saturday, that was.

I'm not clear about all the details, which came at me somewhat faster than I could absorb. But while Ron kept track from offside with critical eye, Ralph and Kerry performed their image-changing stint.

At the start I was inclined to panic. Once I asked, "Isn't that check kind of noisy?" and again, "Aren't we going overboard here?"

But nobody, including the sales lady with an eye for a tie who joined us, appeared to be listening.

At one point I distinctly heard my son say, "He only buys clothes when we prod him—I think he'd better have some more ties and another pair of pants. No cuffs."

They proceeded serenely with the task of color co-ordinating me. As a final inspiration, they fitted me with a red shirt like the one that fellow at the party wore.

Then they let me climb back into my old slacks with the sagging seat and the hint of kangaroo pouch in front, and my faithful all-weather tweed jacket which did seem to have become more than a little ratty.

I'm grateful for their efforts. Unguided, a man could stay a fuddle-duddle conservative all his life.

And tomorrow, come hell or high water, I am going to break out that red shirt!

DEAR ABBY . . .

Educate Mother

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: There is a young woman living next door to us who is in the process of divorcing her husband. She has two beautiful sons, ages 3 and 7.

These children have not been fed properly, Abby. Once when I returned from the marketing and was putting away the groceries, the older boy asked if he and his brother could please share a carrot. I gave them each a carrot which they devoured like they were staring to death. Since then I give them a a good nutritious meal with milk and fresh fruits and vegetables every day.

I know for a fact that they have gone without lunches before I started to feed them. Their dinners consist of hamburgers from the corner drive-in. Their mother has a good job and could feed them properly, but she doesn't.

My husband and I don't mind feeding the boys but we won't always be living next to them, and the next enighbors may not want to be bothered.

Should I talk to the mother about the boys' nutrition? She is one of those hard, tough women who runs with a motorcycle crowd and may not appreciate my interest. —Concerned.

DEAR CONCERNED: Talk to her anyway. Don't be critical of her, and don't give her any cause to feel guilty and defensive, and she'll not be resentful. You have nothing to lose and you could help those boys a lot by educating their delinquent mother.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a wife who gives her husband a birthday card with a note enclosed saying, "I owe you a present"? — Hurt in Louisville.

DEAR HURT: It's better than being forgotten.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my sister. Brenda is 12 and I am 14. Our job is doing supper dishes every night. We have a system. I clear off the table and wash, and Brenda wipes and sweeps up. And we both put away. Doesn't that sound fair to you? Well, Brenda always gripes that her job is harder than my job, and she picks a fight, then my mother hears us fighting in the kitchen so she comes in and chases us both out and ends up doing everything herself. Brenda goes out and watches television and I don't even want to be in the same room with her so I go to my bedroom. How can I teach Brenda a lesson?—Jill.

DEAR JILL: Since the argument is always over whose job is harder — and you think they're equal, offer to switch jobs with Brenda. And if she still complains. tell her to keep her voice down. Kids have been using this dodge to get out of helping their mothers for years because they know mother would rather do it herself than referee a fight.

DEAR ABBY: Is it ever possible to forgive and forget?—Trying Hard.

DEAR TRYING: Yes. But don't dwell on what it is you're "forgiving,"—or you'll never forget.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

TO MARK THINKING WEEK Brownie Packs and Guide companies will be holding birthday parties for Lord and Lady Baden-Powell. Cutting the first slice of her pack's cake is Brown Owl, Mrs. W. J. Leach of the 6th Victoria Brownies. On the left is Brownie Cora Luetzen and at the right is Sherry Williams from the 7th Victoria Guide Company. Demand for Day Care Centres Ignores Child's Need for Love

NEW YORK (UPI) — The women's liberation movement demands day care centres. So does just about everyone interested in working mothers.

What is disturbing is that everyone seems to have thrown out the baby along with the bath water—that is, you hear a great deal about the long overdue rights of women but very little about what's going to happen to the children.

This is not an argument against day care centres or, for that matter, against a tax break for the working mother who must hire a housekeeper or other mother substitute. It is a question, or a series of questions, about the children.

A child from the moment of birth is a person. That amazing human brain is learning and absorbing at a fantastically rapid rate. Research has shown that right from birth the environment of a baby makes a difference and he or she benefits from a variety of experience of color, sound, movement.

Even the unresponsive lump that a newborn can be actually is benefitting hugely from the cuddling, hugging and petting he or she receives. The older the infant, the more important the environment as that tiny ego or sense of self develops into a full-fledged identity.

Now switch over to day care centres. Will they have a one-for-one or even one-for-three ratio between mother substitutes and children? If so, where will all those women come from? Are they to be volunteers or paid? If paid, by whom? What training will they have?

No one, least of all an ardent women's lib advocate, will try to say that all women have instinctive knowledge of how to care for a small child. On the contrary, being alone at home with one's first child can be among the most panicky moments in a woman's life.

Usually she can depend on the help of her mother, or other female relatives who have had children, or on friends. Or perhaps she can afford a professional baby nurse. And she has her pediatrician to advise her, her love for her child that drives her to pore over the plethora of baby-raising books on the market.

If the little ones left at day care centres are to receive proper care, attention and affection, trained personnel with a real feeling for this kind of work become a vital necessity.

It has been suggested, as one approach, that a group of women receiving welfare could be banded together so that one member of the group could be paid to care for the children of the others, freeing those women to work.

Possibly, but it isn't that simple. The woman chosen would need psychological testing, professional training and a personal vocation.

Unless someone starts getting down to the nitty gritty details of the day care centre cry, the result could be a jury-rigged system that produces neurotic children and fulfilled but guilt-ridden mothers.

IN BOOK FORM

Granny Chose Murder For a Second Career

TORONTO (CP) — Reading a macabre murder story is enough to send cold chills up and down the spines of many women.

But Marjorie Freeman Campbell of Toronto doesn't even flinch when she becomes involved in the gruesome details of a bizarre crime.

It's all part of a "second career" for the grandmother who acquired a taste for a good who-dunnit as a teenager and who has used a meticulous mind and disciplined study to prouce A Century of Crime, published recently by McClelland and Stewart. It includes detailed accounts of detective work done in solving some major Canadian crimes.

After writing books and articles on history, medicine, business and religion, Mrs. Campbell has discovered her real forte is crime.

"I'll never get out of this field.

"I don't like the violence in crime. What intrigues me putting together the different clues. You may go ahead with your investigation and then look back and discover something very important—and it all fits in."

Then, she adds, "There are the sidelights you get on human behavior and how people act."

"What interests me is how much differently a murder can be done. A crime committed by passion or jealousy is so very different from one in which the murderer lays out each step.

"I guess I have a mind like a detective."

Mrs. Campbell spent two years at the book and made herself somewhat of an expert on the scientifically demanding subjects of ballistics, serology, pathology and toxicology.

"I had to study every one of these subjects. I bought the books, some of which cost as much as $45 each, and read everything I could find out about a subject.

"Then when I knew as much about it as I could by myself I'd consult with police experts."

She worked with Douglas M. Lucas, director of the Ontario government's Centre of Forensic Science, Provincial Police Commissioner Eric H. Silk and Det.-Sgt. Maurice Inglis, curator of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Museum.

Sometimes her painstaking method of working has its social disadvantages, Mrs. Campbell says.

"People ask me when my new book is coming out a few weeks after I start to write it. It gets so I'm ducking people so I don't have to confess I'm a long way from finishing."

The idea for A Century of Crime came about gradually. Mrs. Campbell, who admits only that she's "over 60," said she had long been interested in the colorful career of 19th century Ontario detective John Wilson Murray, and asked the publishers if they'd be interested in an up-to-date detailed history of his work.

After getting the publisher's approval to proceed, she followed another suggestion to include other major crimes of the last century and wrap it up in one complete book.

The net result is a book that includes, for example, detailed studies of the case of Dr. William Henry King who sympathetically consoled an ailing wife while feeding her cumulative doses of arsenic after conducting daily prayer sessions with her.

But the book doesn't focus on the violence of crime. The real accent is on the disciplined use of modern science and Sherlock Holmes-style detective work.

Mrs. Campbell now is beginning to sift over time-worn manuscripts to provide material for her next book, tentatively entitled Ten Faces of Murder.

Mrs. Campbell's past books include Holbrook of the San, Niagara, Hinge of the Golden Arc, The Story of Beth Jacob, and A Mountain and a City. She has also contributed articles and poetry to numerous magazines.

Mrs. Campbell, whose family includes three grandchildren, believes firmly that a woman's first duty is to her household. So she didn't begin her writing in earnest until her daughters were grown up.

In fact, Mrs. Campbell kept her first writing ventures hidden from the family. She enrolled in a correspondence course, paid for it out of household money and did her writing assignments in the early-morning hours before anyone was up.

Dick and Jane Flunked Grade One in Indian Schools

By ANN DUNSMUIR

"It was utterly ridiculous to try to teach with Dick, Jane, Spot and Puff."

"Some of the children didn't even speak English. That was problem enough without having to explain stories based on WASP city life to children raised in the bush."

Mrs. Margaret Woods, now retired in Victoria, spent her life teaching in Indian schools in the prairies and Yukon.

She remembers one little boy from her first year of teaching in 1925. He said, "I like books but why are there no pictures of Indians?"

Mrs. Woods solved the problem of relating white middle-class life to the experiences of her pupils with what in the school system of the 1920s must have been revolutionary behavior.

She threw out dull Dick and Jane and wrote her own reading texts basing the stories on the daily life of her pupils and the familiar animals they saw in the bush.

Mrs. Woods credits the children as co-authors. "We would go for a walk in the countryside and come back to class and write a story about what we had seen," she said. "The children are part of my books."

Her texts were published two years ago and are now used in all Indian schools in Canada.

The four books in the series, keyed to Grade 1 students, relate the daily life of a little Indian boy called Neepawa and his adventures with animals in the bush.

The readers have been placed in all Victoria elementary schools and are expected to be in use throughout the province in a short time.

Another book is in the hands of a local publisher. It was inspired by a former pupil who asked for "the name of the book with the songs you used to teach us."

JOAN PARTRIDGE

Mrs. Woods had to explain that there was no book. She had composed the songs herself.

"I taught more English through singing and songs than with all the old readers," she said.

She has rewritten the songs, researching the lives of the animals carefully.

"The children are learning from the songs so I have to be correct in my facts," she said.

The 13 songs in the new book have been taped for her by Christine Chester of the department of music at the University of Victoria.

Mrs. Joan Partridge, a Victoria artist, has done the illustrations with the same care for naturalistic detail.

"I research an animal for weeks before I draw it," she said. "I wouldn't want to give a child the wrong idea of an animal." Mrs. Partridge also illustrated the Neepawa readers.

The concern for naturalism grew out of Mrs. Woods' teaching experience.

She found that her pupils would have nothing to do with the Walt Disney-type animals in some books. "They knew rabbits didn't look like that and mistrusted the book," said Mrs. Woods.

She has taught Cree, Soto, Ojibway, Sioux, Peigan plus seven tribes in the Yukon. Many of her students are now nurses, teachers, ministers and, she says proudly, "wonderful citizens."

"There was no such thing as an eight-hour day in a residential school," said Mrs. Woods. "We were teaching something all the time."

After regular school hours she gave free music lessons. Once she loaded her 15 music pupils into a pickup truck and drove to Lloydminster for the Toronto Royal Conservatory examinations. They came home with 14 first-class honors and one honors.

She recalls with pleasure a compliment paid her by an Indian parent. Her husband, Rev. W. J. J. Woods, was arguing with the parent. The Indian said, "Go and get your wife. She thinks like an Indian."

Mrs. Woods remembers one little boy who came to the residential school at Carcross in the Yukon. He took one horrified look at the school cow and disappeared into the bush. It took hours to coax him out.

"In a few days, though, he was grabbing a pail and milking the cow with the best of them," said Mrs. Woods.

The train came to Carcross about every 10 days in summer. One day Mrs. Woods found the children so restless she couldn't teach. When she asked what was wrong they answered, "The pigs are coming today."

Mrs. Woods closed the school and everyone went to meet the pigs. The white children from the village two miles away came too. They had never seen a pig either.

Mrs. Woods made one of her few mistakes with the chickens. The school had ordered an incubator and fertile eggs.

During the 21 days it took the eggs to hatch the children talked baby chicks, drew baby chicks and cut out baby chicks.

Finally an egg cracked open. Out flopped a wet, bedraggled creature that had no resemblance to the cute, fluffy chicks in the picture books.

"It's all wrong," wailed the children.

Mrs. Woods' credibility was restored when the chick dried out and conformed to its image.

She is not the only one to remember her teaching days with affection. Former pupils write to her with love and nostalgia.

One student writes: "I tell my husband about the fun we had and especially when Mr. Woods would pick the day we don't go to school and instead we would go out in the fields and pick the potatoes. And of the times when he would pile us in the truck and take us for a picnic. Sometimes when I'm thinking of those days, I get very lonely and wish those days were back again."

Another student writes, "I have resigned my job for the winter months and instead of joining the rat race for a while am going back to college to further my education. This I strongly feel will further me much more in job positions later on."

Speaking of a little girl who died of malnutrition, a student from the Peigan tribe writes: "Although we were sympathetic this proved to be very embarrassing to us who are trying to better ourselves in the eyes of the white world, as it seems that white people around here are so quick to judge because of one misfortune which needn't have happened. You see the little girl died as a result of ignorance on the part of the parents. . . . I hope I have cleared up any worries you may have about Peigans being in poverty. This isn't so."

Mrs. Woods feels "lost" without the Indians. "At least I feel that with my books I can still help in some way," she said.

She has been asked to write books on Indian culture. "I wouldn't dream of it," she said. "The culture of each tribe is different. The Indians must do it themselves."

She firmly believes that Indians have as much to teach the whites as they have to learn from them. "Indians and whites should all go to the same schools and learn from each other," she said.

This illustrated copy of the Indian 23rd psalm was done by one of Mrs. Margaret Woods' pupils and is one of her treasured mementoes.

Mothers Welcome

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States armed services, facing charges of sex discrimination, are easing long-standing rules barring women from motherhood while in uniform.

The army, for example, will make exceptions now and induct women who are married or have custody of a child under 18.

The navy recently suspended its policy requiring the discharge of women who became pregnant while on active duty.

In reversing its policies, the air force will allow women officers and enlisted women to adopt children, be stepmothers or have custody of a child under 18. But pregnancy still brings automatic dismissal.

This regulation is being challenged by an air force nurse, Capt. Susan Struck, who had a baby while on active duty and is appealing an attempt to discharge her.

Even with the new regulations, the army still is not opening the door to wholesale enlistment of all previously unacceptable women. These include those who were once married, or who have had a pregnancy while unmarried. The changes permits waivers in individual cases.

Fear Hits U.S. Colleges As Campus Crime Rate Rises

By RICHARD BLYSTONE

NEW YORK (AP) — Co-eds on many American college campuses walk at night in pairs or in fear. Students lock their dormitory rooms even for a quick trip to the bathroom. Across the United States a plague of crime is adding to the many woes of academia.

The trend has been building since the mid-1960s, obscured by the drug epidemic and violent political protests, but it is still growing and it is in no sense kid stuff.

"The days when the only crimes on campus were thefts of sweaters or books are long gone," says C. Lee Chandler, chief of campus police at California State College in Long Beach. "Today anything can happen."

Campuses that once were tranquil refuges from the troubles of the world are experiencing grand larceny, assault, armed robbery, murder and rape.

Chandler's force, armed for the last four years, has to deal with thefts of cars, stereos, audio-visual gear and electric typewriters, with bomb threats—"We've had a heavy increase this semester, as many as three a day"—and with muggings.

A Radcliffe student was raped at gunpoint this fall, the first such incident ever reported at the Cambridge, Mass., school. Several dormitories reported an armed intruder.

"I don't even go to the library after dark any more unless I have a guy along," said a Radcliffe sophomore. She lives three buildings from the library.

Nearby at Harvard, armed robbers stole a reported $1,500 in cash and personal belongings in a fall raid on a dormitory.

Two campus policemen were incapacitated for more than a month with stab wounds after they answered an attack complaint at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

An urgent request was made to arm the campus force but the state university system is maintaining its no-guns policy.

Whether or not a school has violent crime, thefts and burglaries are generally on the upswing.

"Dormitory thefts are sky high—up 52 per cent from last fall," says Walter Dodwell, associate security director at Princeton in New Jersey. University of Texas police reported in mid-fall that 1970 petty thefts at the Austin campus totalled 691, compared with 416 in all of 1969.

University of Florida police reported that off-campus students took trucks and raided dormitories to furnish their apartment for fall. The Cornell University bookstore estimates its shoplifting losses at $200 a day, and merchants around many campuses complain of recently soaring theft rates.

There are no national figures on the kind and scope of campus crimes, but those hardest hit appear to be the coastal, the urban and the large schools.

The University of Texas went from no robberies or rapes in 1969 to two each in 1970. Authorities at Rutgers the New Jersey state university, reported that between September and November 1969 five students were arrested on campus for minor offences; in the same period of 1970 the figure was 41, with offences including armed robbery, rape, heroin pushing and assault and battery.

At Cornell, where larcenies are up 20 per cent over last school year, safety director Lowell T. George said the greatest increase in stealing began three or four years back but violent crimes spurted about two years ago.

One result of such statistics is a changed atmosphere on many campuses.

"When you see somebody you don't know in a dorm you're more dubious about who he is, even though you're not used to questioning anybody."

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity members run an evening chaufeur service for co-eds at the University of South Carolina in Columbia, where there were three rapes and several assaults during the fall. Yale, the scene of one fall rape and two other assualts on women, instituted a student-run minibus service.

Rutgers reports some success with four-man student patrols that have walkie-talkies and instructions to take all steps short of physical intervention.

Radcliffe has installed buzzer locks on dorms, increased police surveillance — including plainclothesmen with dogs on patrol — and agreed to offer free basic self defence courses for all women students. Many schools have spent large sums on outdoor lighting.

When Chancellor Willy Brandt signed the treaty with Poland, he officially renounced 40,000 square miles of territory.

GERMANY and POLAND: Today and as they were between world wars

Friendship With Poland Goal of New Bonn Policy

By S. CHARLES ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

The signing in Warsaw of a treaty between the Federal Republic of West Germany and Poland marked the end of many years of German-Polish antagonism, and of more than eight centuries of direct German involvement in Eastern Europe.

When West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, along with Polish Premier Stefan Cyrankiewicz, signed the document, he officially renounced West Germany's claim to more than 40,000 square miles of territory which formerly constituted about one-fourth of the old German Reich.

While West Germany's treaty is substantively only a pact between herself and Poland, it would not have been possible without at least the benevolence of Moscow.

Polish Worker Revolt May Inspire Others

By STANLEY KARNOW
The Washington Post

The current turbulence in Poland represents a radically new development that could have significant consequences throughout eastern Europe and may even affect domestic as well as external Soviet policies.

For the first time in a Communist state, industrial workers rather than students and intellectuals have been spearheading protests against a system that claims to be founded on Marxist principles.

This dramatizes the extent to which Communist bureaucracy has alienated the proletariat it is the theoretically supposed to serve. And the success of the Polish workers in triggering economic and political changes may well inspire labor elsewhere in eastern Europe to agitate for similar reforms.

CHANGES

The changes brought about by the Polish workers since they began their unprecedented strikes in December have been extraordinary.

For one thing, they forced the politburo to oust not only the veteran party leader Wladyslaw Gomulka but to dump Ignacy Loga-Sowinski, the former boss of Poland's trade union. These ousters are now being matched by a widespread purge of provincial party officials.

Under continued pressure from the workers, the new Polish leadership group headed by Edward Gierek was compelled last month to scrap an unpopular plan of wage payments.

An last week, after some 10,000 cotton textile workers staged fresh strikes in the city of Lodz, the communist government made further concession by revoking the price increases that originally ignited the labor ferment in December.

Moreover, instead of cracking down on the striking textile workers as Gomulka did two months ago when the police tried to repress discontented dockers in Gdansk, four politburo members including Polish Premier Piotr Jaroszewicz personally went to Lodz in an attempt to conciliate the labor dispute.

This means, quite clearly, that the Polish communist hierarchy now recognizes that it must respond to workers' demands and cannot simply resort to strong-arm methods.

In addition, by pledging to provide Poland with increased aid to bolster its sagging economy, the Soviet Union also seems to realize that it cannot afford to have internal dissatisfaction eroding the regimes of eastern Europe.

For had the unrest in Poland escalated, the Russians might have been tempted to intervene as they did in Czechoslovakia in 1968. Such a move would have been risky, especially at a time when the Soviet rulers appeared to be divided.

In all likelihood the Polish leaders will strive to resolve their critical economic problems by decentralizing their industrial command, paying more attention to housing and other social needs, and generally adopting "revisionist" marketing policies.

The Polish leadership group is believed to be attracted by the Hungarian model, in which the old communist party hacks have gradually been displaced by sophisticated managers more concerned with satisfying people than fulfilling rigid production targets.

West 'Must Match' Soviet Arms Buildup

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — The West needs more ships, more aircraft and more submarines to match a steadily growing military buildup by the Soviet Union and its Warsaw pact allies, says a NATO military officer.

Admiral Sir Nigel Henderson, chairman of NATO's military committee, said in an interview the West's greatest need is to maintain its anti-submarine warfare capability.

The military committee is the senior military authority in the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organizaion. Sir Nigel, a British officer, retires as chairman April 5.

Sir Nigel said there is a trend among the Western powers not to replace ships when they ran out of commission. The Soviet navy on the other hand contains a relatively greater number of newer ships in a fleet which has been largely built up during the last 20 years.

The NATO officer said that the West has naval superiority in the Mediterranean largely because it has better air cover for its ships, provided from onshore bases and from aircraft carriers.

But as the Mediterranean is such a narrow sea, a Russian foothold in Libya and possibly in Algeria would seriously jeopardize the Western alliance's edge over the strongly increased Russian fleet.

The Atlantic alliance is already reported concerned at the Soviet military and political buildup in Egypt, where the Russians have built missile bases.

The evacuation of all foreign bases in Libya was one of the first demands of the group of young army leaders who took over power in Libya in September, 1969.

Diplomatic sources at NATO headquarters said that so far as use of the evacuated bases is concerned there is no indication yet which way the Libyan leaders will turn.

They are the biggest unknown factor in a crucial area.

The London-based Institute for Strategic Studies lists the Soviet Union and its Warsaw pact partners as sharing 377 submarines between them, of which 80 are nuclear-powered.

Admiral Henderson said the Russians are "capable of building between 10 and 14 new submarines every year, and the evidence is that they are doing this."

The 15 countries belonging to NATO are listed as sharing 262 submarines between them—92 of them nuclear-powered.

Convent Fire Injures 10

DUNMORE, Pa. (UPI) — A Roman Catholic convent was destroyed by fire on Monday Eight nuns and two firemen were injured by the blaze, and many other nuns jumped from second and third story wondows to escape the flames.

The fire razed the convent of Marywood college, the largest Roman Catholic girls college. Ninety nuns and about 30 employees were in the four-story building when the fire started, shortly after midnight.

Two of the injured nuns, Sisters Mary Violet Float and Rose Mary Ludwig, were reported in critical condition from burns. Of the six other nuns taken to nearby Scranton (Pa.), hospital, four were reported in fair condition and two were under observation.

About 250 firemen worked three hours to bring the fire under control. Two of the men received face burns when the roof of the building collapsed.

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government is prepared to make representations to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission to ensure the daytime children's television show, Sesame Street, continues to appear on Canadian television. Education Minister J. C. McIsaac said Tuesday he supports the program and that it should remain on the CBC television network.

Exact Fare Starts

CALGARY (CP) — An exact fare system to become effective April 1 on Calgary Transit buses was approved Monday by city council.

The move is designed to prevent thefts from bus drivers who sell tickets and make change for patrons.

Under the new system, tickets will be abolished and only coins accepted.

Fares would be essentially unchanged with persons over 16 years paying 25 cents, students and children 15 cents and senior citizens 12 cents.

Capsule Caper

WHITECOURT, Alta. (CP) — RCMP are still without a "definite lead" in their search for a missing radioactive capsule and its container. The 50-pound container and its pill-sized capsule of iridium 197, a radioactive substance used for industrial X-rays, were stolen from a parked truck owned by the Century Geophysical Corp. of Canada Sunday. The capsule could cause severe burns and if it is removed from its container, radiation effects could be deadly.

Rates Climb

CALGARY (CP) — Residential water and sewage rates will increase an average of 21 per cent beginning March 1.

The increase, about $16 annually or half the amount recommended by commissioners last year, was approved by city council Monday.

The extra money is needed to finance additions to sewage treatment plants and increase the city's capacity to provide fresh water.

The increase will mean the flat rate to residential users will rise to $7.74 from $6.38 while those with meters will pay an average of $6.61 rather than $5.43 a month.

★ ★ ★

Treatment Ordered

REGINA (CP) — The provincial government has instructed the Prince Albert pulp mill to install secondary treatment facilities and they will be in operation before the end of the year, Provincial Treasurer D. G. Steuart said Tuesday.

Steuart said the government action was taken under the same policy which forced the cities of Saskatoon and Prince Albert to start building similar treatment facilities.

The equipment will cost the mill $1.2 million, he said.

Steuart said the South and North Saskatchewan Rivers are dirty and have been for many years.

Imbalance Charged

CALGARY (CP) — Robin Mathews, an advocate of Canadian nationalism from Carleton University told a University of Calgary audience Monday that non-Canadians who teach at universities without becoming citizens demonstrate "a contempt for the Canadian fact."

"Cultural imperialism" associated with foreign professors could force eventual disintegration of the country, he said.

Less than half the instructors in arts and sciences at Canadian universities are Canadian and less than 55 per cent of those in professional faculties such as engineering are from this country, he said.

Scott Kicks Golden Pants Of Oscar

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can an actor talk himself out of an Academy Award? Perhaps so—if the actor happens to be a fiery rebel like George C. Scott.

Scott kicked Oscar in his golden pants this week by requesting for the second time in his career that his name be withdrawn from the list of nominees for best actor for his performance in Patton.

"I simply do not wish to be involved," the actor said in Spain, where he is making a film.

Said a longtime colleague of Scott: "Isn't that just like George? He could have won the Oscar in a walk . . . But George couldn't leave well enough alone. He was born a rebel and he'll die a rebel."

ALWAYS A REBEL

Rebellion has marked the 43 years of George Campbell Scott and appears to be the wellspring of his immense acting talent.

He was born in Wise, Va., went to high school in Detroit, where his father was a corporation executive. George was a tough lad to handle, even for the U.S. maries. He joined at 17, began drinking heavily and acquired his broken nose during one bender.

After four years as a marine, he enrolled in the University of Missouri School of Journalism. It didn't take.

He drifted toward the drama department and just before he was scheduled to graduate, he walked off the campus to marry a Stephens College student, Carolyn Hughes. He never went back.

The next few years were marked by vain attempts to support a wife and baby by acting in theatre stock. The marriage failed, and so did Scott's attempt to avoid alcoholism. He bummed around the country.

CLICKED IN NEW YORK

Finally he began to click in the New York theatre. "My drinking got worse. The more successful I got, the worse the drinking became. I'd suffer blackouts and loss of memory. Life became a sort of hazy charade."

His 13-year bender ended in 1958, when he was starring in his first Broadway play. He woke up in jail.

He credits his rescue to Alcoholics Anonymous and his third wife, actress Colleen Dewhurst of Montreal.

But if Scott's alcoholic excesses diminished, his combativeness seemed little affected. That quality contributed to his effectiveness in such films as Anatomy of a Murder, his first Academy nomination; The Hustler, the first nomination he tried to decline; Dr. Strangelove; The Flim-Flam Man and The List of Adrian Messenger.

Nixon, Agnew Have Hope For Long, Successful Run

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY

WASHINGTON (WP) — Governors of 46 states Tuesday night discovered — as had six presidents before them — that there's always Hope.

Bob Hope, who has played the White House in probably the longest run in theatrical history, came again to entertain at a dinner for guests in Washington for the national governors' conerence.

Bob Hope said that he didn't want to get too funny because "the president tells jokes, too. I heard the State of the Union message — he called for a new revolution. Since then he has been tailed by the CIA, the FBI, army intelligence and the Pasadena branch of the DAR. And he's had three obscene phone calls from Barry Goldwater."

Hope said that everybody listened closely to the president's State of the Union mesage "except for some of the cabinet members who were reading the want ads.

"The president said he was against air pollution — anything to keep the country from getting Muskie."

Hope went on to discuss his golfing experiences with his good friend Vice-President Agnew. He said:

"I want to apologize to Vice-President Agnew that we had the earthquake before Agnew came. Palm Springs is now known as 'Agnew's Fault.'

"In justice to the vice-president, it is hard to concentrate when the entire gallery is saying the Lord's Prayer.

"I suggest to the president that he send the vice-president to Laos with a number three wood."

Bob Hope said that on one drive the vice-president got "a birdie, an elk, a moose and a mason."

Weekend Of Music

Brentwood College is planning a weekend of music that promises to be a true festival.

Friday and Saturday mark the first provincial independent schools' music festival and organizers Bill Ross and Gil Bunch anticipate the participation of 10 schools and more than 450 children.

The schools, from Vancouver and Victoria, will enter both choral and instrumental classes over the two-day period. The weekend will culminate in evening concerts to be held both nights at 8 when Brentwood College choir and band will be presented as well as competition winners.

Classes, to be adjudicated by Dr. George Corwin of the department of music at the University of Victoria, include junior and senior girls' choral groups, boys' choral groups, string and woodwind chamber groups, bands and orchestras, and a recorder ensemble.

"Our objective," said Ross, "Is not to foster a competitive spirit, but to join together in the true spirit of a festival. We also feel that we can benefit from criticism as a group. There will be no prizes."

THE WEATHER

Skies were cloudy again Tuesday night over most of British Columbia. Rain fell along the outer coast and a few snow flurries were reported from the Kootenays. A few clear periods did occur in the Cariboo and as a result fog patches formed in many areas.

The present unsettled conditions persisted again today with occasional rain along the coast and a few snow flurries inland. Arctic air is again building over the province from the north and west and indications are that temperatures will drop slowly during the next few days.

MEN FIGHT LIKE DOGS

ANKARA (AP) — A fight between two dogs in a village 150 miles south of here ended in the deaths of their owners, the semi-official Anatolian news agency reported.

It said each dog was was owned by two brothers. When a dispute arose over judging of the dog fight, the owners and some bystanders pulled pistols and started shooting.

The four owners were killed.

PRISON LACKS WALLS, BARS . . . OR BEDS

PURDY, Wash. (UPI) — Washington State's new women's prison was designed as a rehabilitation unit without bars or penitentiary walls. But when the first 32 inmates arrived this week, the $4.1 million facility also was without beds.

A Southern California manufacturer blamed the recent earthquake for the shipping delay, which forced the first inmates to sleep on mattresses on the floor.

Uvic Quiz Team Falls To Winnipeg

The University of Victoria's quiz team was defeated over the weekend by the University of Winnipeg, one victory short of tying the CTV university challenge win record.

The team of Robert McDougall, captain, Denis Johnston and Bruce Izard, all of Victoria, and Glen Paruk of Port Alberni won eight games in trips to Ottawa last fall and earlier this year for television tapings of the program.

Their loss to Winnipeg, 140-115, will be shown on Channel 8 at 5 p.m. Sunday although it might be delayed for one week.

The Uvic team gathered $8,500 from its victories to be used for student scholarship in a manner to be decided by team members. No member of the team can share in the funds themselves.

In the first trip east last November, Uvic won four games stopping the winning streak of McGill University of Montreal at nine games.

Uvic won another four matches in a trip in January.

Looks Important At All Times

VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman's facial looks are just as important to her after marriage as before, Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm has ruled in awarding a British Columbia housewife $16,000 for scars left on her face as a result of a highway crash.

The award was made to Kathleen Anne Wood of Haney, who received face injuries when the car in which she was riding with her husband was in a three-car collision Oct. 6, 1968 on Highway 401 in the Fraser Valley.

Erik William Wood, her husband, was awarded $6,610 for jaw and teeth injuries.

The award was against John Simonerau of Coquitlam, driver of one of the other two cars. Driver of the third vehicle was absolved of blame.

"It is urged (as it always is in a law suit) that once a woman has legally married and has children, a scarred face is no longer of any great consequence in the assessment of damages," said the B.C. Supreme Court judge.

"I do not agree with this submission.

"Age, sex and marital status are factors. However, this plaintiff is young and was entitled, as is any female of any age, to live her life with the facial features with which she entered this life," said Mr. Justice Dohm.

LONDON — Kieran Fogarty, husband of a second cousin of the Queen, pleaded guilty to stealing a police beacon while celebrating the Chelsea soccer team's victory in the English Football Association Cup final last April. Fogarty and a companion were each fined $125. The Queen's cousin, Francesca Fogarty, 22, was cleared of the charge.

VANCOUVER — Veteran Member of Parliament Harold Winch is off for Ottawa today and will be back in the Commons on Thursday. The 63-year-old NDP member for Vancouver East has been convalescing since November when he suffered a cardiac arrest during an operation for cancer at Vancouver General Hospital.

LONDON — Roger Cordrey, one of the Great Train Robbers, will be freed on parole from prison soon after serving only half of his 14-year sentence, authorities disclosed Tuesday night. Britain's home office said the 47-year-old Cordrey, in Coldingly prison just outside London, was told a few days ago that his parole application has been granted.

MIAMI — When the time comes for the cross to light up at a Ku Klux Klan recruiting rally this weekend, it won't matter whether anyone has a match. They'll just flip a switch. Instead of using a gasoline-soaked cross, the Klan will be using an updated electric version. Public information officer Ralph Page said Klan officials had told him they would switch to a flameless cross because of fire permit requirements.

GLENDALE, Calif. — Prince Philip became the first member of British royalty to visit Pitcairn Island in the Pacific, islanders reported by radio Tuesday. His 8½-hour visit came 181 years after 10 mutineers sailed the HMS Bounty to the remote five-square-mile island to escape British justice. "Prince Philip was a delightful host," said Tom Christian, the island's radio officer, who communicates regularly with a Seventh-day Adventist Church headquarters in this Los Angeles suburb.

TORONTO — George Christian Hanna, who became famous in 1956 by falsely claiming to be a man without a country, was one of two men deported from Canada Tuesday night from Toronto International Airport following unsuccessful appeals to stay in the country. The other was Harsh Chadha, a graduate student at the University of Toronto and a Maoist, who went to India. Hanna, who real name is Ahmed Aouad, went to Egypt on his fourth deportation from Canada. He was deported this time for being in Canada illegally and for a fraud conviction. Chadha was deported for criminal convictions arising out of political demonstrations.

SANTA MONICA — A Superior Court judge has ruled that Jennifer Young, 6, is in fact the daughter of Academy Award winner Gig Young despite the actor's claim he has been sterile since a vasectomy was performed in 1938. Young's attorney, said the 54-year-old actor had filed the suit against his former wife, Elaine, because she was "asking for unreasonable child support and making other unreasonable demands."

AUTO STRIKES OWN DRIVER

STANSTED MOUNTFITCHET, England (UPI) — Alfred Burton was hospitalized after being knocked down by his own car.

It refused to start, Burton explained, so he got out and began to crank it by hand—forgetting it was in gear.

DRIVE BETWEEN ROAD, AVENUE

The name game continued in Saanich Tuesday night with municipal planning committee coming up with a fresh recommendation for Royal Oak.

The new east-west highway, linking Wilkinson Road from West Saanich Road via the Royal Oak Interchange over the rebuilt Patricia Bay Highway to Blenkinsop Road, will be called — Royal Oak Drive.

Royal Oak Avenue will continue its name, but it will be just the tail-end running south and west from the new alignment, to what used to be its intersection with Patricia Bay Highway.

* * *

Wilkinson will maintain its name, from Burnside Road West to West Saanich Road.

The new recommendation, which is subject to council approval, appeared to meet approval from several residents who attended the meeting.

An earlier recommendation of the committee would have carried the name Wilkinson Road across the Royal Oak Interchange with the road changing its name to Royal Oak Avenue on the east side.

Screening or Fence Must Hide Equipment

Saanich municipal planning committee recommended Tuesday night that heavy equipment vehicles be permitted to be stored outside in light industrial areas — providing there is between six and 10 feet of landscaped screening and/or fencing.

Planner Tom Loney, noting recent approval for storage of such equipment in light industrial zones, said a clause had been overlooked which forced this to be done under cover.

* * *

This was felt to be too restrictive and led to the recommendation that outside storage be permitted — with screening or fencing.

Landscape screening was defined as meaning either plants only or plants and brick, plants and wood. The committee added fencing to this.

Ald. William Campbell said Saanich can't get businesses to come into its light industrial zones and suggested fencing only.

Loney said at present storage in the open wasn't permitted and "we're trying to make it more liberal" by allowing this with suitable screening.

Advice for Balcony Planters

By HILDA BEASTALL

Trough gardens and patio planters have a lot in common; and both types of gardening are readily translated into apartment balcony terms. Weight, and water run-off are the two limiting factors. Both need to be discussed in consultation with apartment managements who will be aware of the building's construction.

Hilda

A cubic foot of soil weighs 75 to 85 pounds. Figuring the weight of the container you have in mind will not be diffecult with this base to work on. When soil is newly watered it weighs more; sandy soil is heavier than the same volume of soil without sand.

Containers on lower balconies do not require the depth they need at higher levels where wind drying is more prevalent. A ten-inch depth near ground level will suit many plants for a few years, while 15 inches is a minimum up where the winds blow.

Width will be in proportion to depth, eight inches minimum for any planter or tub. Anything less will need watering a couple of times on each summer's day when the plants are in full growth and possibly flowering too.

Normally, planters and tubs at high elevations will need a long, slow watering each day from about the middle of April, and a fine water spray over the foliage too for cleansing and refreshing. Both these attentions are best given during a period when sun is not shining directly on the plants, and preferably during daylight to avoid fungous troubles.

A type of balcony planting requiring less attention is one constructed in the form of a miniature rock garden. Here the number of plants is minimum; and the rocks retain moisture in the soil.

Wind too plays less havoc with the type of alpine plants suited to such a miniature garden, yet they may be chosen for brilliance and perfection of both flowers and foliage.

Careful selection with the aid of a specialist in these plants results in years of enjoyment. Alpines do not like to be crowded, but with the years they will spread slowly into breathtaking mats of beauty.

On a mostly sunny balcony, one's leisure time could well be spent studying and photographing these exquisite plants.

It is now that one feels the urge to do some gardening. Investigate the possibilities for your own balcony, and open a new gate in your gardening world.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Maurice Stans, currently the Secretary of Commerce in President Nixon's cabinet, was once a good amateur bridge player. As to whether he plays any bridge in these pressure-packed days, I do not know, but back in the early 1960s he had the master's touch. Here is an example of his ability. He was in the East seat.

Neither side vulnerable North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ◇.

West's three of diamonds opening was won by Stans' king. I imagine that the "natural" play at this point would be to lead a heart, hoping that partner can take a trick or two in this suit. Had this play been made, declarer would almost surely have fulfilled his contract.

Suppose a heart had been led at trick two. South would have put up the king, which West would have captured with the ace. A diamond would then be led to East's ace, after which the latter would lead another heart. South would in this trick with his queen.

A spade would next be led to dummy's ace, and this would be followed by a spade to South's king. Now would come the club ace, the club king, and a third club, South ruffing high. With East's queen falling, both of dummy's remaining clubs would be winners. Enteriig dummy via the spade jack, South would now discard his heart 10 and diamond nine on the two high clubs.

But Mr. Stans did not return a heart at trick two. From West's opening lead of the diamond three (which figured to be West's fourth highest), and the appearance of the diamond deuce in dummy, Stans knew that South had started with three diamonds.

At trick two, Mr. Stans cashed the diamond ace. At trick three, he led another diamond, dummy trumping West's 10-spot. It now became impossible for declarer to both establish and cash the club suit, since the vital trump re-entry to dummy had been removed when dummy was forced to ruff a diamond.

After drawing trumps, declarer cashed the ace and king of clubs, hoping to catch the queen. When he didn't, he led a low heart and finessed his 10. And so the defenders cashed two heart tricks and two diamonds, for a well-deserved victory.

Steve was standing at the window. 'I think I'll make the tiled patio a bit bigger," he said. "We've got a lot of those square tiles down in the basement."

"A good idea. So they'll all be the same size." Mary smiled. "How much bigger?"

Steve thought a moment.

"Say 43 more tiles," he replied. "It'll still be square."

There were no gaps. How many tiles did the patio contain?

Motorists 'Adapt' To Licence Decals

Motorists are "adapting to licence renewal decals very well," J. D. Heinekey, administrative officer, said Tuesday.

Heinekey said drivers should be sure their plates are clean and dry when the new decals are applied over the old. He suggests you don't wash your car immediately after putting on the new decal, until the adhesive has set.

The Motor Vehicle Branch office on Menzies Street will be open the rest of this week and Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. to handle last-minute buyers.

One Month, One Chicken

DETROIT (AP) — "I'm for health standards as much or more than the next man," said George Verbeke, "but this seems silly."

A federal health standards law which went into effect Jan. 2 required an inspector's presence at any establishment processing more than 20,000 chickens a year, and Verbeke's market on Detroit's east side barely qualified.

Verbeke had to provide the inspector an office and equipment and pay his overtime, some $60 a week. The government paid the inspector's salary of $10,000 a year.

The inspector stayed for one month and rejected one chicken.

He was withdrawn last week after agriculture department lawyers decided such requirements really were for wholesalers processing millions of birds and found a loophole excluding Verbeke's market.

Rich Will Get Money From Poor in CDC Plan—NDP

By DAN TURNER

OTTAWA (CP) — The proposed Canada Development Corp. would take money from all income levels and put it at the disposal of those with enough money to invest, an NDP critic said Tuesday.

Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) told the Commons the concept of the bill to create the corporation is inequitable.

"The corporation would use as its nucleus tax revenue in the amount of $250 million over three years, money which will come from all Canadians, including the poor and the economically marginal. . . ."

The latter, he said, would have no money to invest because all their money goes for essentials and for taxes.

"This money wil be put at the disposal of those with enough surplus money to indulge in investment, so that the money collected from all income groups will be put at the service of a minority who are neither poor, unemployed, nor underprivileged."

Mr. Rowland was arguing in favor of an NDP amendment to the bill that would scrap the concept of an independent private corporation started by government funds, and replace it with a Crown corporation responsible to Parliament.

The bill proposes that the government put $250 million into the CDC over three years, then open it to private investment to a maximum capitalization of $1 billion.

The government would end up with perhaps a 10 per cent interest in a private corporation designed to channel public and private funds into industrial growth programs, while private interests would be limited to holding three per cent of voting shares each.

Debate on second reading of the bill was to continue today.

Mr. Rowland condemned the proposal for the corporation on the grounds that its dedication to the profit motive would make it ineffectual in correcting regional economic disparities, repatriating the economy and bringing a halt to exporting by developing secondary industries to process raw materials now exported in their primary form.

TAKES OTHER SIDE

Martin O'Connell (L—Toronto Scarborough East), parliamentary secretary to Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, was as positive about the bill as Mr. Rowland was negative.

He joined Barnett Danson (L—York North) in paying tribute to former Liberal finance minister Walter Gordon for first promoting the concept eight years ago.

Newer, technicaly-based Canadian industries need help to compete with foreign interests, he said, and the CDC should concentrate in joining such industries to ensure they have the resources to compete, rather than sell out when they reach the limit of what they can do without improved management, marketing techniques, research facilities and more capital.

The CDC could at least hope to package some of these corporations into larger units and even get them into production overseas.

In addition it could test some U.S. subsidiaries to determine whether they are acting as branch plants or as autonomous corporations.

Mr. O'Connell said nobody knows whether these subsidiaries have market-sharing arrangements with their parent companies, and therefore refuse to fight for overseas markets.

The CDC could offer to join them for a venture into world markets. If they would not go then, Mr. O'Connell said Canada would have a case and would have to deal with it.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) said he didn't think the time had come to establish a development corporation in Canada.

Already there were many fields of industry not making a profit and producing at half capacity because they didn't have buyers.

In 1970, he said, Canadian industry produced $84 billion worth of goods, but sold only $54 billion worth.

Now the government wanted to create a super-corporation that would close some businesses rather than taking measures to increase the purchasing power of Canadians so existing businesses could survive.

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) said the proposed corporation could, if handled properly, help Canadians control more of the country's development.

But to attract investment it would have to guarantee that the security and return on investment would be at least as good as that offered by savings accounts and Canada Savings Bonds.

It should not, he said, be used to take over Canadian firms threatened by U.S. takeover unless it could be proved that the takeover would be detrimental to Canada's sovereignty or harmful to the industry in question.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: Earth vs. the Flying Saucers (1956 science fiction), Hugh Marlowe, Joan Taylor. Earth is warned by a group of "saucermen" that it must surrender in a certain amount of time or it will be destroyed.

5:30, Channel 13: Today I Hang (1942 drama), Walter Woolf King, Mona Barrie. Accused of murdering his partner, Walter is in the shadow of the gallows, but the wife of the deceased man comes to his aid.

7:00, Channel 12: Earth vs. the Flying Saucers (continued).

8:30, Channel 8: Harlow (1965 drama). A fictionalized biography of the late movie queen of the '30s.

9:00, Channel 7: Charade (1963 mystery), Cary Grant, Audrey Hepburn. Slick and sophisticated as its two charming stars. It's a lightweight affair, amid some marvellous European settings.

11:45, Channel 7: Charlie Chan at the Olympics (1937 mystery), Warner Oland, Katherine DeMille. Fair mystery, interesting shots of the sporting events.

12:00, Channels 6 and 8: The Lavender Hill Mob (British, 1951 comedy), Alec Guinness, Stanley Holloway. A mild-mannered bank employee evolves a foolproof plan, he thinks, to make away with an armored car gold shipment. Hilarious comedy, fun all the way.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Many a person has been much distressed when he has been told by his doctor, or his lay friends, that he is a hypochondriac. Many people use this term as a sort of general description for a person who seems overly concerned by his health, but more specifically, a true hypochondriac is a psychopathic worrier who concentrates his attention for years on one organ which he is sure is terribly diseased. One cannot shake him from this view, no matter how much reassuring evidence to the contrary one gathers.

I once had a patient of this type who for years had been sure he had a cancer of his stomach; he had gone from clinic to clinic, and had always received the same report of a normal stomach, but he could not be convinced. I asked him if he would be reassured if I were to open his abdomen under local anesthesia and show him that everything was normal in his abdomen, and he said that even that would not reassure him. I told him that I saw no sense in examining him further. He had given up a large business to spend all his time getting his stomach X-rayed, and he had never married because he wanted to devote all his attention to saving his health. Clearly, what the man needed was not a stomach specialist but a psychiatrist.

Interestingly, the word hypochondriac is of Greek origin — hypo means under, and chondro means the cartilage of the ribs (the cartilages that hook up with the breat-bone), and so it refers to the upper abdominal cavity. During my 25 years at the Mayo Clinic, as a stomach specialist, I saw hundreds of these people who perhaps, for a year or more, had been travelling from one big clinic to another getting thoroughly examined, being told that nothing serious had been found, and moving on to yet another clinic where they could get even more tests.

Occasionally, after many years, a man such as the one I saw with the "stomach cancer" will switch his fears from the stomach to the heart or to the colon. I learned that it is useless to try to cheer such a person, or to do as some surgeons do, and operate and then say that the supposed disease was found and removed. On waking from the anesthetic, they still feel their old anxiety and discomfort.

★ ★ ★

In matters outside of health, these persons are often shrewd, intelligent and sensible. A few of the wealthiest men I have known were unhappy hypochondriacs. Some, like the publishers of body-building magazines or manufacturers of "health foods" or patent medicines, have cashed in wonderfully on their intimate knowledge of the fears, beliefs, hopes and desires of their fellow hypochondriacs. They knew how to write advertising copy that would appeal to them.

Hydro Funding To Continue

By BRUCE YEMEN and PETER McNELLY

Premier Bennett said Tuesday that "until further notice" he will continue financing B.C. Hydro development out of government-controlled funds.

He was replying in the legislature to Liberal Leader Pat McGeer who said Bennett's refusal to send Hydro to the open money market has held back schools and hospital construction and "social betterment" in general.

Bennett said financing out of government-controlled funds such as the Canada Pension fund in the past two years of high interest rates will have saved millions of dollars over the full term of the bonds.

He said the government will save millions more in commissions and other charges by continuing to provide capital development funds for Hydro and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway from government-controlled funds.

Bennett repeated earlier statements that not a single school or hospital is being held up "for monetary purposes" and the government has "no difficulty" in meeting all its financing responsibilities.

McGeer said B.C. Hydro in a 1967 prospectus forecast that it would borrow more than $300 million on the open market in addition to more than $600 million from government-controlled sources in the 1967 to 1972 period.

As yet, said McGeer, Hydro has not borrowed a "single penny" on the open market.

If Hydro were to live up to its forecast, it would have to borrow its next $300 million on the open market, McGeer said.

Bennett said the B.C. government is the only one in the world that managed to finance all its needs on its own during the financial "crisis" in the past two years.

"We will continue until further notice to finance within our own funds," he said, adding it would save "millions and millions over a period of time."

Bennett said he couldn't understand McGeer's attitude because he calls on the one hand for the cheapest electric power to be developed yet he asks that it be financed at the most expensive interest rates on the open market.

McGeer said that if Bennett sent Hydro to the open market he would end up with $300 million to invest in job-producing capital projects of a social betterment nature.

REDUCTION

He also asked whether the premier could seek a Hydro rate reduction for elderly citizens who use minimal amounts of power but get hit with high bills.

Eileen Dailly (NDP — Burnaby North) asked for the elimination of $40 security deposits which she said Hydro requires of jobless people.

Dennis Cocke (NDP — New Westminster) said his constituents have had a harder time dealing directly with B.C. Hydro over gas bills than with the city's power system for electricity.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) asked Bennett to tell the house the priorities for the $400 million the budget indicates will be spent on crown agencies.

Bennett said the first priority is for schools and hospitals, but he did not answer Williams when asked how much money will go to Hydro, how much to the PGE and how much to other government agencies.

"I think we're entitled to have some idea how a figure like $400 million will be broken down," Williams said.

Williams also received no answer when he asked Bennett to say what the capital requirements will be for the next three years for Hydro and the PGE.

Storm Hampers Rose Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — A steady stream of witnesses passed through Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday at the trial of Paul Rose as Prosecutor Jacques Ducros tried to establish the source of eight ransom messages received last October from the kidnappers of Pierre Laporte.

The long and tedious process was hampered by the absence of a Crown prosecutor, a court clerk, a stenographer and five witnesses because of a severe snowstorm which snarled transportation in the city.

Tuesday's session of the trial was delayed until nearly 3 p.m. by the storm.

Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said he understood the circumstances which caused the delay "but I would urge the lawyers and the jurors and anyone else involved in the case to do their utmost to make sure we can proceed with some speed."

The judge reported that several members of the jury have come down with colds and he swore in Dr. Eugene Fournier, of the Quebec Provincial Police, to act as their medical adviser until the end of the trial.

The 12 jurors are being held incommunicado during the trial and are allowed to phone their homes and offices only once a day.

DEAL WITH MESSAGES

Proceedings Tuesday revolved around the ransom messages from Mr. Laporte's kidnappers.

During the week of Oct. 10-17, while the late Quebec labor minister was being held by his terrorist captors, Montreal radio stations received anonymous telephone tips that "communiques" had been planted in such places as litter boxes and telephone booths.

Before the Judge

A 56-year-old man who missed the bus to Campbell River Monday because of a bottle of rum was sentenced to seven days in jail by Judge William Ostler Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to vagrancy.

Eugene Mathe, no fixed address, was also fined $50 by Ostler Monday when he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk.

He told the judge at the time he was going to catch the bus to Campbell River.

"What stopped you from getting the bus?" Ostler asked.

"A bottle of rum," Mathe replied.

Ostler said it might have been better if he had taken the bottle on the bus with him.

Mathe was arrested, court was told, about 11:15 p.m. Monday in Centennial Square with nowhere to go, a partially-filled bottle of wine at his feet and $2.29 in his possession.

Norman F. Miller, 20, of 1323 Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a two-year probation for two counts of breaking, entering and theft.

The charges involved break-ins into homes at 815 Rockheights and 813 Hutchinson Feb. 13. Items worth $120 were taken from one home and the accused was apprehended at the second home.

Egypt Stands Firm On Total Rollback

From AP-REUTER

The Israeli government has created three committees to draw up territorial terms and new borders it would accept in a Middle East peace agreement, informed sources report. But Egypt has told the Big Four again that peace is impossible unless Israel withdraws from all the land it captured in 1967.

Premier Golda Meir's cabinet said Sunday that Israel never would return to the boundaries existing before the 1967 war, but said it is willing to negotiate new "secure and agreed" territorial lines.

Mahmoud Riad, Egypt's foreign minister, Monday summoned the chief U.S. diplomat in Cairo and the ambassadors of Britain, France and the Soviet Union. A ministry spokesman said he told them the Israeli refusal constitutes "a challenge to the UN charter, the Big Four powers and world public opinion."

"Peace can not be established in the area without Israel's total withdrawal from the entire Arab lands occupied in June, 1967," Riad said.

Riad said Egypt considered Israel's response a categoric rejection of the peace probe by United Nations envoy Gunnar Jarring.

DESCRIBE GROUPS

The sources in Jerusalem said one border mapping committee is headed by a senior army officer, another by key government officials and the third is made up of experts on international law. They were formed last month after Israel returned to indirect peace negotiations with Jordan and Egypt under Jarring, the sources said.

Each committee is working on a specific aspect of peacetime orders, they said.

The army group is drawing up the over-all plan using principles devised by Defence Minister Moshe Dayan that include retention of the Gaza Strip in Egypt and the Golan Heights in Syria.

They also call for Israeli troops at Sharm el Sheikh, at the foot of the Sinai Peninsula, and along a strip of the southern Sinai coast to protect Israeli shipping from the Red Sea to the port of Elath.

The committee of government ministers is working on a plan to keep Jerusalem united under Israeli rule, including the Arab sector taken from Jordan in the six-day war. Jordan would have sovereignty over Moslem shrines in the city, possibly as leased enclaves.

The third group is studying treaties and armistices.

NEW STATE PROPOSED

One suggested solution to the problem of relocation of Palestinian Arabs displaced when the United Nations set up the Jewish state in 1948 has been creation of a separate state along the River Jordan.

President Anwar Sadat indicated Egyptian policy may be changing. He told Newsweek magazine that "a reasonable way to solve the problem" would be compensation for lost land and a referendum among Palestinians on whether to be part of Jordan or to have a separate state linked with Jordan.

Syrian President Ahmed el Khatib resigned Monday and was elected by the 173-man People's Council as its Speaker.

Pollution Control Operating

VANCOUVER (CP)—MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced completion and start-up Tuesday of a $3.5 million water pollution control installation at its pulp and paper plant in Port Alberni.

A company spokesman estimated a total of $10 million has been spent on various anti-pollution systems at the mill since it was built in 1948. A $1 million electrostatic precipitator was recently completed there.

The latest control unit includes a 200-foot diameter clarifier and a 30-acre aeration lagoon which treats 20 million gallons of waste water from the mill every day.

MacMillan Bloedel said the system provides both primary and secondary treatment of the mill effluent and that it is the first installation of its kind at a pulp and paper mill in the B.C. coastal region.

The company said that because its Port Alberni mill is situated at the head of a long ocean inlet and besides an important salmon river, there is a difficult effluent control problem.

Scouts Plan Expeditions

Three rugged expeditions are planned this summer by senior scouts from the Greater Victoria area.

Twelve seniors will attempt a nine-day hike through wild terrain along the original Hudson's Bay trail of 1849, from Lodestone Lake near Tulameen to Hope. The 85-mile trek will start July 31.

Scout Executive Jack Scrivener said the trail has not been used for 100 years.

A 100-mile horseback ride also is planned for July, starting at Gold Bridge, 70 miles northwest of Lillooet.

A third crew will hike the West Coast trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield searching for caves containing Spanish treasure.

Mediation Talks At Pulp Operation Extended a Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — The term of mediator Gus Leonidas in the contract dispute of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada at Gold River has been extended to March 4.

Mediation talks, involving the union's additional demands to the industry master contract negotiated last year, continued here Tuesday.

About 380 men at the Tahsis Co. Gold River operation are seeking special classification and pay-rate adjustments.

Princess In Accident

LONDON (AP) — A car driven by Princess Anne collided with another in London today, Buckingham Palace reported.

A palace spokesman said that no one in either car was injured and that the automobiles continued on their way after police "attended to the usual formalities." Damage was said to have been slight.

The princess was driving a Reliant Scimitar sports car given her by her family for Christmas.

The palace said the car in front of Anne braked suddenly and the princess' car struck the rear.

Pancake-Flipping Kansan Wins Despite Icy Course

LIBERAL, Kan. (UPI) — Mrs. Barbara Rinehart, wife of an oilfield worker, bounded down the icy brick streets of Liberal Tuesday in 67.7 seconds to win the annual Shrove Tuesday international pancake race against the women of Olney, England.

Ruth Faulkner, a 19-year-old physical education student, earlier had won the Olney leg on the s-shaped, 415-yard course in 68 seconds.

Mrs. Rinehart's victory evened the series between the two towns at 11 wins each and represented Liberal's second victory in as many years.

The 24-year-old Mrs. Rinehart battled a treacherous ice-covered course following Monday's blizzard which swept through this Kansas prairie town. Snow plows had worked through the night to clear the streets.

Miss Faulkner, who stands nearly 5 ft., 10 inches and weighs 150 pounds, sprinted from the market square to the church of St. Peter and St. Paul five yards ahead of the rest of the field of 16 pancake tossers.

She was given the traditional kiss of victory by 15-year-old Andrew Soul, one of the choirboys. He eagerly repeated the kiss six times for the benefit of photographers.

Miss Faulkner is a student of physical education at Teachers Training College and failed to finish the race in her first try two years ago. This time, she tossed her pancake the required three times shortly after the start and was then able to concentrate on running.

"My legs are like jelly," said Miss Faulkner, puffing. "I am going to give up smoking."

"I think I won because I went over the course last night and I took it easy around the shape bends instead of what I did two years ago," she said.

Miss Faulkner and most of the other contestants wore miniskirts beneath the required apron and kerchief on their heads.

Gladys Dillingham, in her 70s, gallantly finished last. She has taken part in 16 of the races.

"Now we have to see what they do out at Liberal," said the Rev. Ronald Collins who revived the race, a custom believed to have originated in 1445.

The modern competition at Olney began in 1947 and was expanded to compete with Liberal in 1950.

In Brampton, Ont., despite weather conditions that nearly turned the affair into a flop, about a dozen women turned out for the city's first annual Shrove Tuesday pancake race Tuesday.

It took 18-year-old Marlie Abel, of Brampton, 121 seconds to run the 415-yard course, flipping her pancake all the way.

For her effort she won $250 to award to the charity of her choice and a silver tray for herself.

FLIPPERS RUN THROUGH RAIN

GANGES — Pancake flippers raced through rain and cold winds in the annual Shrove Tuesday pancake races here.

Dennis Beech, representing Island Garage, won the Perpetual Frying Pan in the international event. Jim Merston of Bank of Montreal was second, and Dave Roberts of B.C. Ferries third.

Beech also won the men's open, followed by Mal Flann and David Roberts.

Ruth Archer won the women's open, Carol Kaye was second and Linda Simpson third.

Kathleen Rathwell won the grandmothers' event, followed by Ellen Miller. Walter Brigden, the only grandfather to enter, was declared winner.

In the opening event, kindergarten winners were Ardith Darby, Jody Harrocks and Patricia Westcott.

Convener Vicki Griffin said she was considering postponing the event because of the weather until the enthusiastic children, 50 strong, showed up as competitors and spectators.

Prizes included Centennial dollars, candy bars — and packages of pancake mix.

$21.3 Million Provincial Budget Passed

It took two days and 10½ hours for Premier and Finance Minister Bennett to get his $21.3 million in spending estimates approved by the legislature.

Approval for the final vote came at 10:35 Tuesday evening. Debate began on Monday.

The 71-year-old premier appeared to stand up well under the fatigue of the grilling, engaging in continual exchanges with opposition members, making the occasional reminiscing speech but vowing defeat for various Opposition opponents at the next election.

Bennett failed to answer many questions that were asked and answered others that weren't asked.

He got a wide range of advice from all sides of the house.

Bob Williams (NDP Vancouver East) said the government should raise taxes on unused forest lands held by logging companies.

This would increase the proportion of forest revenues in the provincial budget, a figure which has been dropping throughout the last decade, Williams said.

He said the sales tax should be revised so that people buying luxury items should pay more.

"Those on lower incomes end up paying more, relatively by far, into the sales tax than those with greater incomes."

Williams urged Bennett to switch his philosophy of taxation from "regressive" taxing which hits lower income earners to one which would hit the wealthy harder.

This move would require more equitable assessment legislation, Williams said.

MINERAL EXPORT

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) criticized Bennett for a paragraph in his budget speech which notes that B.C. minerals are being heavily shipped to foreign countries under long-term contracts.

"You're selling the furniture to make payments on the mortgage on the province," he said, calling for more processing of minerals in B.C. to produce more jobs.

Bennett told Opposition Leader Dave Barrett that extra staff has been given to the home assistance branch to help overcome a backlog of home acquisition grant applications.

Barrett said the delay in processing applications is causing serious inconvenicne and hardship to some people.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) asked Bennett to bring in legislation requiring public disclosure of the annual report of B.C.'s inspector of trust companies.

The vote to approve the estimates for the premier's office passed the house at about 5:30 p.m. Finance department estimates took another three hours.

'Revolt' Against Transit Policy Urged

A "revolt" of the elderly and the poor against the provincial government's "peanuts" transit policy was urged in the legislature Tuesday by Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East).

The MLA said he wasn't advocating real violence, "just political violence" against the government's failure to understand urban transit problems.

He said the time is coming when free bus service will be provided on the same basis that governments will spend $200 million today to put a third crossing over Burrard Inlet to bring more cars into downtown Vancouver which is already clogged with cars.

Macdonald said the provincial government's $2 million annual transit subsidy is "peanuts."

The MLA said hardships on the elderly and the poor will result from recent announced cutbacks in bus service.

Bob Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) said free fares should be instituted shortly to encourage people to use buses more so they will be ready for the day when rapid transit is a reality.

FARE DROP

Rather than maintain Hydro's $2 million subsidy, he said, the government should "begin decreasing the fares and increasing the subsidy to $20 million annually."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said the province is making "phoney" offers to subsidize rapid transit with federal support and should "put up the money now."

The present $2 million subsidy is nothing but a "policy of failure," he said.

Erller in the debate, Bennett repeated that the province will pay 37.5 per cent toward rapid transit if the federal government will match this and the participating municipalities will put up the remaining 25 per cent.

He said Ottawa has not accepted the plan as yet, but the province will continue to press the matter.

Civil Service Raises Shrinking—Nimsick

The civil service appears to be heading for a smaller percentage increase in salary this year, New Democratic Party MLAs said in the legislature Tuesday.

Leo Nimsick (NDP — Kootenay) noted the amount of money set aside for salary increases this year is the same as last year — $7 million.

Based on a higher payroll, it would work out to a smaller percentage than last year, he said. The percentage increase last year was in the 6 or 7 per cent range.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett agreed with Nimsick and disagreed with Premier Bennett who said the increase would be based on recommendations from the civil service commission. It can't be based entirely on the commission's recommendations if a dollar limit is set, Barrett said.

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby Edmonds) charged that the civil service is understaffed and overworked "to a degree that is a scandal." He said this contributes to a high loss of trained staff to private industry.

Hydro Expropriation Record Bad—Socred

The residents on Munn Road in Saanich whose homes have been expropriated for a B.C. Hyrdo power line deserved a better deal, a Socred backbencher told Premier Bennett Tuesday.

Ernie Le Cours (SC — Richmond) told the premier he had talked with some of the property owners on Munn Road who lost their homes last year.

"I think, after speaking with them that there's some room for improvement in our relations with those who are about to have their land expropriated."

Hydro's expropriation record, he said, is "very poor."

LeCours also asked Bennett to revise Hydro's manner of dealing with claims against it by private citizens.

He said the company ought to tell people that they must obtain a lawyer and issue a writ if they wish to press charges against Hydro for accidents on buses.

Hydro has a "moral responsibility" to see that people injured on buses get proper redress, Le Cours said. It is not enough to take no action unless the complainant does everything in the proper legal way.

Moran Dam Decision Already Made—NDP

Premier Bennett was challenged in the legislature Tuesday to deny that he has virtually decided to build the Moran Dam on the Fraser River in spite of possible damage to salmon fisheries.

"Does the premier see the way out as the building of another big dam to name after another politician?" asked Bob Williams (NDP — Vancouver East).

"Is that what he sees as the grandstand play for the next provincial election?"

NO ANSWER

Bennett made no answer to efforts of other New Democrats on the same issue.

Williams asked Bennett to disclose all directives he has given to the B.C. Energy Board in its study of the province's power needs for the next 15 years.

Disclosure, said Williams, might confirm that the premier has already in effect directed the board to arrive at a conclusion to build the controversial Fraser River dam because he has denied them the right to study thermal power.

"On other occasions the premier was quick to jump up and say he is opposed to the Moran Dam," Williams said, suggesting the "kite-flying we have been getting from Dr. (Gordon) Shrum (Hydro chairman, is in fact the premier's own kite."

THERMAL POWER

Williams said it is clear that thermal power is the cheapest possible power and that the energy board should be studying it from the point of view of "cleaning it up" for acceptable power generation in B.C.

Williams suggested the government was already being sued for "inadequate" planning on one dam — the Peace River Dam — and asked "what kind of price" will be paid if the Fraser dam is built without proper planning.

Rotten Egg Problem 'Solved'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three scientists at the University of British Columbia claim they have developed a radiation process that will knock the smell out of pulp mills.

Dr. Lazlo Paszner, one of the scientists involved in the project, said the invention has been proven to work under laboratory conditions and could be installed in pulp mills at a cost ranging from $900,000 to $1.5 million apiece within two years.

In a press conference Feb. 11, last year Premier Bennett and Resources Minister Ray Williston announced that a prize of $250,000 had been established by the provincial government to encourage research on elimination of pulp mill odor.

They said the first person to demonstrate a solution to the smell problem in a B.C. kraft mill would get the money.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. is attempting to engineer a working prototype, he said, before the industry is given a full demonstration of the method.

The process entails the use of radiation in low levels to eliminate sulphur from mill emissions before they pour out of the smokestacks. Sulphur is the main cause of "rotten egg" type of smell in pulp mill emissions.

The other two members of the team are Dr. Jack Wilson, forestry professor and head of the project, and Jean Baptiste Straforelli, a graduate student in forestry. Paszner is a wood chemist interested in radiology research.

ONE BITE DESERVES ANOTHER

SOUTHPORT, England (UPI) — Tom Grime told a court he bit a German Shepherd's ear because it was the only way he could get the animal to release his hand. Mrs. Betty Timpson, the dog's owner, was ordered to keep the animal under proper control.

AT MY LAI . . . body count 250

Calley Admits Killing . . . But Not Murder

CALLEY
'. . . that was my job'

'I did not sit down and think in terms of men, women and children . . . just as enemy soldiers'

By WILLIAM GREIDER

FT. BENNING, Ga. (WP) — Lt. William L. Calley, the platoon leader accused of murdering 102 human beings at My Lai, insisted Tuesday that he fired fewer than 18 bullets in that body-strewn Vietnamese village. Yet, in the next breath, Calley freely admitted that he ordered his men to "waste them" and he "wasted" a few lives himself.

"I felt then and I still do that I acted as I was directed," the 27-year-old lieutenant asserted firmly. "I carried out the orders that I was given and I do not feel wrong in doing so, sir."

Thus, weaving confession with denial, Lt. Calley provided his army court-martial with the first public accounting of his behavior at that now-famous cluster of huts and bamboo by the South China Sea. Calley denied the grossness of the crimes charged to him—yet he confessed to a part of them. He suggested some personal reluctance to take part in wholesale slaughter—yet he thought the slaughter was justified.

"Well, I was ordered to go in there and destroy the enemy," Calley said. "That was my job on that day. That was the mission I was given. I did not sit down and think in terms, of men, women and children. They were all classified the same . . . just as enemy soldiers."

The contradictions were summarized in his dogged repetition of this distinction—he denies killing human beings; he admits destroying the enemy. In Calley's case, according to the army, the "enemy" was unarmed and unresisting and, in those circumstances, killing them constitutes murder.

By his own recollection, the sandy-haired lieutenant fired his M-16 rifle at My Lai inhabitants on five occasions as he moved through the hamlet. Four of those shootings are not a part of the government's charges against him and, thus, his confession could not incriminate him. The fifth episode, however, was at an irrigation ditch east of the village where other witnesses have described stacks of blood-spattered victims—women, children, babies, old men. The army says at least 70 died there.

★ ★ ★

"I heard a considerable volume of firing to my north," Calley related, "and I moved up along the edge of the ditch and around a hooch and I broke out in the clearing and my men had a number of Vietnamese in the ditch and were firing upon them, sir."

"What did you do after you saw them shooting in the ditch?" asked George Latimer, Calley's chief defence lawyer.

"Well," he admitted, "I fired in the ditch also, sir."

Furthermore, Calley acknowledged that on at least one occasion, possibly two, he gave a direct order to "get rid of" or "waste" the villagers collected by one of his soldiers, Paul Meadlo. In the legal sense, that could make Calley responsible for those deaths, too, even though Meadlo, an enlisted man, pulled the trigger.

But Calley's account attempted to place any specific blame for that killing at the feet of his former company commander Capt. Ernest L. Medina, and, in a more general way, Calley blamed the war itself and the way it is fought.

On five separate occasions, Calley testified, his commander directly ordered him to "waste them," the defendant's favorite euphemism for kill. Calley said he merely passed the order on. At the pre-mission briefing, Capt. Medina was asked if his order to "destroy everything" at My Lai included women and children, Calley remembered.

★ ★ ★

"He said that meant everything," Calley said. The captain emphasized that platoon leaders were not to let the inhabitants — of whatever age or sex — get behind the troops because this had led to ambush in the past, Calley explained.

Even so, Calley insisted that, during the mission, he wanted to keep some prisoners alive—to use them later to "clear the minefields." That action would have also been a violation of the laws of warfare.

These years later, Calley could still recall vividly a combat soldier's fear of minefields: "It's kind of like being in the dark, knowing there is a step there and afraid to walk. You have to almost force every foot down because you are (scared) and your knees just don't want to react." Calley's idea—generally accepted in his area of operation, he said—was to send the Vietnamese peasants in first—as human mine detectors.

In more general terms, the defendant suggested another possible incentive for what happened at My Lai—the pressure to produce "a high body count" in Vietnam combat.

"The division was pressing for it," Calley recalled, "beacuse they wanted to get the Americal Divison up to the standards of the other divisions that had been there for a longer period of time. And, of course, every company was competing with body counts."

The platoon clearly thought it was an absurd way to measure the war's progress. "There is no way to really figure out exactly a body count," he said. "At that time, anything went into a body count, VC buffalo, pigs, cows. Anything dead, you put it on your body count."

The My Lai body count, Calley estimated from memory, was 250. But he insisted that, when the lunch break came, he still had the original magazine in his rifle—so he had fired it fewer than 18 times.

His narrative fairly galloped Calley through the village, scurring up and down the line of the First Platoon, prodding his men to go faster, ducking in and out of hooches and vegetation. Twice, he said, Capt. Medina radioed to complain of his slowness.

"I explained to him what was slowing me down," said Calley, "and he told me to waste the Vietnamese and get my people out on line."

OTTAWA RECORDS SNOWIEST WINTER

OTTAWA (CP) — Residents buckled down today to the job of digging out from under a 12-inch snowfall Tuesday that made this winter the snowiest on record in the city.

Tuesday's snow brought the winter total to 141 inches, the highest since records were first kept in 1890. The old mark, 140.4 inches, was set in 1915-16.

Major Banks Reduce Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's major banks cut their basic interest rates today following a federal government signal designed to stimulate business activity and employment.

In general, the moves brought the level of interest rates about two per cent lower than they were at the start of 1970 when the government was in the midst of a tight-money period in an effort to control inflation.

The Bank of Canada signalled the latest cut when it announced Tuesday night that the bank rate was being cut to 5¼ per cent from 5¾ per cent, effective today. It was the second reduction in less than two weeks and the lowest for the rate since the autumn of 1967.

The chartered banks reacted by cutting their prime rate on loans to 6½ per cent from seven per cent, effective Monday, March 1. At the start of 1970 the prime rate was 8½ per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal all announced similar cuts.

CONSIDERS CUT

The Toronto Dominion Bank, which earlier cut its rate to 6¾ per cent from seven per cent effective Monday, Feb. 22, was considering a possible further reduction.

General mortgage rates also were expected to drift lower in the next few weeks. The Royal Bank in its announcement today cut one-half of one per cent off mortgage rates, lowering them to 8¾ per cent for National Housing Act mortgages and to 9¼ per cent for conventional mortgages.

The bank rate doesn't affect individuals directly since it is the rate the central bank charges on infrequent loans to the chartered banks.

But it is a signal of federal government policy and reductions indicate efforts to pump more money into the economy —generally referred to as easy money.

The prime rate is the rate the chartered banks charge to their best customers for low-risk loans but is more important since it is the basis on which all interest rates generally are based.

INTEREST CHOPPED

Today's announcements were accompanied in most cases by reductions of one-half per cent in the interest the banks pay on some types of savings accounts.

J. Leonard Walker, president of the Bank of Montreal, said the lower rates should be of major importance in reducing the inflow of short-term funds from abroad.

"This should ease some of the upward pressure that has recently pushed the Canadian dollar almost to par with the United States dollar."

MILLION PIECE SHIP SALE

AUCKLAND (CP) — The Vancouver-built sailing vessel Endeavour II, wrecked on a New Zealand sandbar during a storm, has been pounded into "a million pieces," her owner Ronald Craig said today.

The Canadian businessman who spent $1 million building the replica of Captain Cook's Endeavour said what is left of the 183-foot three-masted barque — equipment and rigging — will be offered for sale as is.

The ship is not salvageable.

M-F Layoffs Called Ploy In Bargaining

TORONTO (CP) — Union spokesmen said Tuesday night the decision by Massey-Ferguson Ltd. to lay off 2,100 farm implement workers here and in Brantford, Ont., is a bargaining ploy in the face of a March 2 strike deadline.

However, a company official said the temporary layoffs, due to start next week, would be carried out even if a new contract is signed on company terms. Massey-Ferguson said a $19 million loss last year makes it necessary to "bring inventories into balance."

"A traditional bargaining manoeuvre," said Dennis McDermott, vice-president and Canadian director of the United Auto Workers. "They treat collective bargaining like a military exercise."

In Brantford, Gerald McConnell, a union steward, said Massey-Ferguson is "just trying to frighten workers" out of going on strike.

Mayor Howard Winter of Brantford was also concerned. Massey-Ferguson, with three plants, is the biggest employer in the city of 63,000.

"We need more unemployment here like we need another snowstorm," he said.

The UAW has been bargaining for a 50- to 56-cent-an-hour wage increase in the first year of a three-year contract with three-per-cent increases in the second and third years. The basic hourly rate now is $3.18.

Massey-Ferguson said 500 of the 1,800 employees in Toronto will be laid off next week and another 400 later in the month.

In Brantford, 650 of the 700 employees at the combines plant will be laid off March 1, and the 400 employees of the foundry plant will be laid off March 15.

Snow Stopping

MONTREAL (CP) — Clearing skies and light flurries today promised Montrealers respite from their third severe snowstorm in two weeks.

Mather Offers Student Job Plan

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A $12 million program to put 1,000 students in each province to work this summer at cleaning up pollutants and debris on the landscape was proposed to the cabinet today.

Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) said his idea would help reduce the three problems of pollution, unemployment and youth unrest.

Hanoi Sees New Threat

Laos Push Alarms N. Viets

Times News Services

SAIGON — While U.S. planes continued the bombing of North Vietnam today, a Hanoi military leader was quoted as saying that recent moves by the United States in Indochina had placed the security of his country in great danger.

The North Vietnam news agency reported that Defence Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap told a Soviet embassy reception in Hanoi Tuesday night that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had launched a large-scale invasion of southern Laos in coordination with Laotian government and Thai forces.

"In massing such a big force just south of the 17th parallel, the U.S. also plots against the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam," he said.

NO LIMIT

Moreover, President Nixon had declared that he would not put any limit on the use of U.S. power, especially air power, in any part of Indochina, Giap noted.

"This is a new very serious step taken by the U.S. imperialists to escalate their war in violation of the sovereignty and neutrality of the kingdom of Laos, to the great danger of the security of the DRVN."

The latest U.S. raids on the North were a follow up to 50 strikes along the Laotian border in North Vietnamese territory during the weekend.

Tuesday night and early today, two F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers fired three air-to-ground missiles southeast of the Ben Karai pass in North Vietnam, near an infiltration route from the North. A third plane attacked radar-controlled anti-aircraft sites in the area.

TAX CHANGE DELAYED . . . BUT ONLY BRIEFLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Government sources say that Finance Minister Edgar Benson's definitive proposals for revision of federal tax law will not be introduced in the Commons before May.

This represents a months' delay from the schedule the government had a few weeks ago. It was then stated the tax-law changes could not be introduced before the end of March, but might come in April or May.

The plan will be introduced in the Commons with a budget speech, triggering a six-day general debate before the tax law amending bill itself is introduced formally.

Teamsters Claim 37 Pacts Signed

The Teamsters Union said this morning it has signed new agreements with 37 companies in the general trucking and warehouse industry in British Columbia.

The agreements contain the struck goods clause which has been the stumbling block between the union and the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for more than 70 companies, most of which have not signed new agreements.

Blair Whitelock, head of the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 31 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said the companies which have signed new agreements handle 40 per cent of the highway freight business.

The legislature, meanwhile, did not debate Tuesday a government notice of motion which would order an end to the strike-lockout which began Friday.

DETAILS LACKING

Labor Minister and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who gave the notice of motion, would give no explanation of why it was not put to the legislature Tuesday.

Carl Anshelm, chief negotiator for the companies, met Peterson Tuesday but would give no details. He said he is disappointed the government has not intervened.

Whitelock said the extent of the new agreements signed with 37 companies would make the legislature's debate "an exercise in nothing because the public is not being inconvenienced."

He said Peterson was "just flying a kite when he said that the public is being inconvenienced by this dispute. The public cannot be inconvenienced unless the dispute goes on for some time."

CROSSED LINES

The struck goods clause allows Teamsters to refuse to operate equipment brought through picket lines by supervisors or others. The union already had a clause allowing union members not to cross picket lines.

During the 1969 oil refineries strike, however, while Teamsters refused to cross picket lines, supervisors took tanker-trucks in and out and turned them over to Teamsters for delivery.

Seahtor Ed Lawson, head of the Teamsters Union in Canada, said the union doesn't want to be "legal strikebreakers."

In Victoria, two of the three member companies of the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association — Johnston Terminals and Capital Freightways—have closed down but a third, Dowell's

Rabbi Expelled

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Belgian authorities today expelled Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the militant Jewish Defence League. They said they did so because he would not guarantee he would not try to speak at the World Conference on Soviet Jews.

Maritime Defence Group Threatened by Arms Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — Withdrawal of Nigeria from the eight-nation Commonwealth committee on maritime defence in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans likely will scuttle the committee before it can even meet, informed sources here said today.

Canada is a member of the committee, established at last month's Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore as a delaying tactic on the issue of British arms for South Africa.

The tactic worked for only one month and while Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, was still trying to arrange the committee's first meeting, Britain announced earlier this week it will sell military helicopters to South Africa.

Mr. Smith is in Ottawa for a meeting late today with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. He was to leave immediately after the meeting for London.

Nigeria is one of two African members on the committee. The other is Kenya.

INDIA MAY FOLLOW

India has indicated it is likely to withdraw from the committee following the Nigerian move.

The British decision has made it "very difficult for any of us to continue in the study group or to have anything to do with it," highly placed sources said.

The Indian foreign ministry warned in a statement last Monday that any British decision to sell arms to South Africa before the study group completed its work would have "serious implications for the very existence of the Commonwealth."

The main African opponent at Singapore to British sale of armaments to South Africa was not Nigeria.

The most criticism came from Zambia and Tanzania, which are not members of the committee.

$1,350,000 PAID FOR GIRL'S LOSS

LAURA

NEW YORK (AP) — A Long Island girl who lost her arms after she touchel an electrical transformer in May, 1968, will receive $1,350,000 in what her lawyer called the largest such out-of-court settlement in the United States.

The girl, Laura Falconer of Centereach, N.Y., was three years old at the time of the accident. While playing in a lot near her home she touched the transformer, which had been placed there by the Long Island Lighting Co. Her arms were severely burned and subsequently amputated.

The device had been put in the lot to serve a housing development, but the development never was built. The transformer was in a locked steel box, but someone had broken the lock.

Nixon Slaps Curbs On Construction Pay

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon has given management and labor a clear indication of his toughening stand against inflation by imposing wage controls on government - sponsored construction work.

The White House announced Tuesday Nixon suspended indefinitely the Davis-Bacon Act of 1931 which controls wages paid on building jobs financed by Washington. Officials estimate that these amount to about one-third of the $90,000 million in construction projects at present under way in the United States.

Labor's immediate reaction was hostile, and construction industry chiefs said the president's action would be ineffective and inadequate.

But Nixon appeared to have backed away from a direct showdown with either group by ruling out a politically-volatile general freeze on wages and prices throughout the industry.

Instead, he suspended the legislation under which men employed on government construction work are paid at the prevailing local wage rate, which usually means the highest scale for private projects.

FLEEING MEN GET SINKING FEELING

STAFFORD, England (Reuter) — Two men carrying suitcases full of stolen property had a sinking feeling as they raced across a snow-covered lawn.

What they thought was the lawn was an ice-covered swimming pool.

The men whom police helped to dry off Tuesday after they got out of the pool, Barry Halstead, 25, and William Mansfield, 23, each were sentenced to 18 months for burglary in this central England town.

Peter Wilson, 24, who was waiting for them in a getaway car, also got 18 months.

WALLACE ON DOCTOR HASSLE:

Loffmark Must Speak for Himself

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark — not the Social Credit party — must clarify whether he lied to the legislature, Socred backbencher Dr. Scott Wallace said today.

The Oak Bay MLA said in an interview today he was sad to see Premier Bennett had made the Loffmark controversy a party issue Tuesday when he announced the minister has his personal backing.

"The responsibility rests directly on the shoulders of one man to clarify the situation, and not on the party as a whole," Wallace said.

He said he would not say whether he tought Loffmark had lied to the legislature. But if the health minister has lied, as the Liberals have suggested, he has no choice but to resign, Wallace said.

'I still retain the hope that the minister will make a statement. I don't think that any institution can persist in any real way if the honor of any member is left in doubt."

WALLACE
. . . matter of principle

In the house Tuesday Bennett said that in the parliamentary system cabinet ministers are "on the recommendation of the premier."

"I want to say the minister of health services has the complete confidence of the premier of B.C."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said allegations against Loffmark are serious enough to warrant a "committee of privilege" to study the issue.

Macdonald said Bennett's reply is "strictly a partisan answer . . . That's a 38-17 answer and it's not good enough."

The government has 38 seats and the opposition, 17.

Loffmark was accused of filing an untrue statement in the legislature after he took issue with charges that he had threatened to look into the medical qualifications of a Clearwater doctor who was campaigning vigorously for a hospital.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1971 —PAGE 25

DEAR OLD FRANK

Hero Re-Visited —Something Gone

By Jack Scott

Browsing yesterday in Poor Richard's Bookshop my beady little eyes fell upon a 1900 edition of Frank Merriwell's Shrewdness or Brain and Brawn by Burt L. Standish. Before Howard Kessler, your genial prop., could brace himself for the customary haggling I'd closed the deal for a solitary buck and was out and sprinting down Fort Street.

Oddly enough, though they're in short supply, the Merriwell books aren't collectors' items like the Horatio Alger classics. What's more, this particular copy was showing its great age of 71 years. But I can't remember being happier about an unexpected find.

★ ★ ★

As usual, the knowledgeable Kessler had all sorts of fascinating information about the author. In real life, it seems, Standish was Gilbert Patten, a handsone six-footer born in Maine in 1866. He was just 17 when he sold his first piece to Erastus Beadle, king of the dime novel game, for a cool six dollars and even in the years of his fame, when his books were selling at a rate of 135,000 copies a week, he seldom made more than $250 for a story.

Scott

Like Horatio, Gilbert was a man with an incredible output that averaged 20,000 words a week and though he was a suffocating moralist in print, his private life, like Alger's, was unorthodox. He was a militant Fabian Socialist and twice divorced, which may account for the fact that when Franklin P. Adams, the New York Post columnist, rediscovered him at the age of 75 he was stoney broke.

The Frank Merriwell series began when Standish was 30. Over the next 18 years he wrote no less than 208 Merriwell dime novels that sold more than 125 million copies to people like Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, President Woodrow Wilson and me.

Frank was the super-hero of all juvenile literature, a Yale man who "had a body like Tarzan and a head like Einstein" and a heart of purest gold and, not to put too fine a point on it, I worshipped him, which may account for the fact that I'm such a red-blooded, clean-cut boy today.

Just having the book in my hot hand brought back vivid memories of the place where I used to read after school and through the long summer days. An old maple tree stood by the back of the house my family lived in then. You climbed up through the branches and then stepped across to the roof where its slope was gentle. You could lie on your stomach with the sun filtering through the green leaves and read all day and your mother would never know where you were.

★ ★ ★

Perhaps I should have left it at that and not pressed my luck by re-reading the book. Mind you, Standish was a far better writer than Horatio (it would be hard not to be), but in "Frank Merriwell's Shrewdness" he doesn't exactly seem to stake a claim to immortality.

I was alternately amused and nostalgic. On Page 60, where Frank is surrounded by an ugly mob of "townies" and asked to identify himself, he squares his preposterous shoulders and announces in ringing tones, "I am Frank Merriwell of Yale, captain of the Yale football eleven, that has come here to play Princeton in the big game today!" There is a great murmur and respectful falling-back by the crowd, but somehow it didn't move me as it once did.

Back there when the world was young, up under the canopy of the maple leaves, that line would have filled me with deep emotion. I would hear a triumphant tar-a-ta-tar-a-ta of trumpets and my stomach would be a jelly of love and admiration. Now, even the weight of the nostalgia couldn't keep a laugh in its respectful place.

I must confess I was amused, too, on Page 82, when Frank, after getting up from his death-bed, kicked the winning goal for Yale. Some kick it was, too. There was a wind of hurricane intensity, you see, and Frank had to kick away from the goal posts to score.

"Such a kick for goal has seldom been seen on any field," the narrative goes, somewhat redundantly. "The time-keeper's whistle blew, but the ball was over and beyond the goal posts before the blast cut the air and Frank Merriwell's kick had had won the game for Yale in the very last second of the time remaining before the end of the second half of the game!"

★ ★ ★

Back when the world was young it would have seemed the most natural thing in the world, expected, eagerly anticipated, yet as exciting as anything that had ever happened and causing an internal whoop of joy. Now it could only be a whoop of laughter.

If nothing else, re-reading that old, well-loved book was an invitation to some long, sombre reflection on what happens to a boy who becomes a man.

The boy has something, it came to me, that is forever lost in his later years, the ability to believe in miracles, the pure, burning faith in the super-hero.

I wish I had some of that faith in me now, as I had it in me when I scaled the old maple tree. I wish I could believe in a Frank Merriwell, wish I had that magnificent confidence that the goal was going to be kicked against the wind of the hurricane in the last second of the game to win it all for Yale and for me.

A Footnote

On Feb. 8 in this corner I announced that "within the next day or two," Lorraine, the wife of George Royal Oake IV, our city editor, would give birth to a daughter weighing eight pounds, three ounces.

The baby was born yesterday at 7:14 p.m. in St. Joseph's Hospital, 15 days after my announcement.

The baby did not weigh eight pounds, three ounces. The baby weighed nine pounds, three and-a-half ounces.

The baby was not a daughter. The baby was a son to be called George Royal Oake V.

Readers now wishing further predictions, prophecies or forecasts are asked to call to make private appointments.

St. Andrew's

ALTAR MAY GO IN CATHEDRAL'S CENTRE

St. Andrew's Renovation Stalled By Opposition in Parish Ranks

By STEPHEN BROWN

Opposition by some parish members has stalled a proposed $48,000 interior renovation in St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral that would move the altar from the sanctuary to the centre of the church.

"We will probably sit tight for awhile," Father Richard Caldwell of the cathedral told the Times.

He was replying to charges by parishioner Daniel Sterling, of 363 Davida, who said renovation would have been approved for a March start at a meeting of the parish board three weeks ago had not there been so many opponents present.

Caldwell said "it doesn't seem suitable to go ahead at this time," mainly because the 80-year-old cathedral has more urgent priorities, such as new roofing, heating and window caulking.

"I understand what they're doing," Sterling said. "They're biding their time."

The plan, in line with modern liturgical practices in many Roman Catholic churches, involves moving the altar at the spot where the nave and transepts cross and filling the sanctuary with pews facing toward the main doors of the cathedral.

Sterling is opposed to it on both sentimental — "it sounds like a round-table conference" — and financial grounds.

"They had the architect John A. Di Castri at that meeting and somebody asked him how much all this would cost. When he said $48,000, people just about went through the floor.

"Forty thousand bucks is chicken feed in some places but to a Catholic congregation that's a lot of money.

"We've already got $80,000 debt. That works out to $144 in interest alone that we owe for every Sunday we go to church."

●

"If they've got $48,000 to spend, they should give it to the Indians — we stole their land to start with."

He said more than 300 people signed a petition a year ago asking that no changes be made to the cathedral unless approved by the parishioners. One of the things the petition specified not be changed was the location of the altar.

"Do we have to go through this every year?" Sterling asked.

Caldwell and Monsignor Michael O'Connell, rector, said the petition was not felt to be a "legitimate expression of opinion," because many of the people who signed it were Catholics from other parishes than St. Andrew's.

"Many Catholics from other parishes come to St. Andrew's from time to time and are not aware of the talks (on proposed changes) that are going on," said O'Connell.

●

He said Sterling is "raising a phoney issue" because the final decision will be made by a general meeting of the whole parish, not by the parish board, though the board does make a recommendation. "It's all going to be done democratically."

Sterling said "the cathedral doesn't belong to the parish board. They're just trustees—and judging from their past performance they're not doing a very good job."

He said the cathedral interior used to have "a very inspirational character — the right paintings, statues and altars.

"Then someone took the pope's call for simplicity too far — they threw the altar out in the alley and a hermit from Campbell River cut it up into trinkets.

"We Catholics paid between five and seven thousand dollars for that altar. We just don't have that kind of money to throw away."

Sterling is also still mad about the board's decision to paint over "with an awful flat paint" the dark oak panelling around the sanctuary, and to paint over some wall murals, copies of famous paints "That took someone from St. Ann's one year to paint."

He said the cost or the cathedral projects "is scaring people away" from the church.

●

"We're a very patient people. We don't want to go against our pope, our clergy, our bishop. But we've got to live within our means."

Asked if the alterations could be done by volunteer labor from the parish, Caldwell said the costliest items in the renovation project — a new lighting system and carpeting — could not.

The new lighting alone would account for nearly $20,000 of the total.

"Any parish is going to be in debt to a certain extent," he said. "It will be largely up to the people whether they can afford an extra $48,000."

Revolt Spreads On Health Costs

School boards continued their revolt over public health costs Tuesday night and the chairman of Greater Victoria's health board said today he has "every hope" there will be a new regional deal by spring.

Frank Waring, the Saanich alderman who has just taken the chair of the metro health board, admitted financing of the board's activities is "a hodgepodge" but doubted Health Minister Ralph Loffmark would apply himself to resolving it before the end of the current legislative sitting.

A year ago almost to the day Loffmark stood in the house to announce a new regional system for administering public health services throughout the province was pending. This was sufficient to stop Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay from pulling out of the metro health board over what they consider an inequitable financing formula.

SOOKE REJECTION

Now a new revolt has blossomed, this time among area school boards who last year contributed about $178,000, a third of the health board's budget.

Sooke school district trustees decided Tuesday night to "reject" their share of the health board's new budget. They want more information on current and future health care costs.

At the Saanich school board meeting Monday night, trustees discussing the same question decided to ask the department of education to stop assessing school boards for this sort of public service. They want to be left to spend their budget on education.

NEW DEAL SOUGHT

And two weeks ago Dr. Philip Ney, representative of the Greater Victoria school board on the health board, told the latter that his school board wants a new deal, a contract with the health board which will specify services to be provided and their cost.

This school board's complaint underlines one of the two major problems surrounding the health board's operation in recent years:

- Lack of staff.
- A complicated financing formula which Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt argue has them paying far more than their share.

The Greater Victoria school board says it is not getting the health services it's entitled to, such things as the services of a speech therapist, audiologist, psychologists and psychiatrist.

WARING
. . . 'hodgepodge'

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the board's senior medical health officer, has pointed out repeatedly in recent years that lack of funds to hire the necessary staff has hamstrung the operation.

The board's staff is supposed to cover an area reaching from the Gulf Islands to Port Renfrew, meaning a population of close to 200,000, including about 40,000 school children.

It provides services in a wide variety of areas, including communiciable disease control, nursing, pre-natal and post-natal care, health clinics for the elderly, food, water and hospital inspections, lab analyses and prisoner medical exams.

INDESCRIBABLE

The board's operation is financed by a practically indescribable grant structure which has funds coming from the federal and provincial governments as well as ratepayers, the latter on different contribution scales.

The latest complaints from the Greater Victoria school board prompted Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock to propose recently that the city, Oak Bay and Esquimalt again pull out of the health board.

The board is composed of representatives from these three municipalities plus Saanich, Central Saanich, North Saanich, Sidney and the four area school boards.

LONG PROPOSED

Waring said today that in his view the solution is to do what has been long proposed, put the health board's operation under the jurisdiction of the Capital Regional Board.

The provincial government should set out a complete policy on the service required, then make it financially possible to hire the staff needed.

Waring said the health board has written the government, requesting a meeting with Loffmark, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Education Minister Donald Brothers.

LAYOFFS AVERTED

B.C. Hydro has worked out an arrangement with the Amalgamated Transit Union to avoid any layoffs at this time, a spokesman for the crown corporation said Tuesday.

A large percentage of the drivers will take their holidays early, the spokesman said. This will mean fewer temporary employees will be hired for sightseeing this summer and the manpower situation will be reviewed in the fall.

Crime Climb Continues With 5,853 'Code' Cases

Crime in Victoria rose by 21.8 per cent during 1970, according to figures released Tuesday by the Victoria Police Commission.

The 1970 crime statistics show there were 5,853 Criminal Code cases reported during the year, compared with 4,813 in 1969.

The increase rate of 21.8 per cent compares with a figure of 36.2 the year before, which was the highest in the last five years. The rate of increase during 1968 was 6.2 per cent, and in 1967, 5.6 per cent.

THEFTS INCREASE

Comparisons show that while most Criminal Code offences increased in 1970, the percentage of cases "cleared" fell. Cleared cases refers to those in which charges were laid.

The number of cases cleared in 1970 was 32.3 per cent of the number of offences, while in 1969 the figure was 38 per cent.

TWO MURDERS

Value of stolen property reported was $261,902 in 1970, compared with $219,599 in 1969. Property recovered in 1970 was worth $39,501, compared with $57,204 in 1969.

Theft of goods under a value of $50 continued as the most common offence. There were 1,547 cases reported in 1970 and 461 were cleared. In 1969 the reported cases number 1,099 and 309 were cleared. The 1970 clearing record was better — 30 per cent to 1969's 28 per cent.

In 1969 two murders were reported and one was cleared. In 1970, two were reported and three were cleared. Rape cases reported in 1969 and 1970 were even at eight, but four were cleared in 1969 and one was cleared in 1970.

Breaking and entering was the second highest offence, with 1,026 cases reported, 119 cleared, or 11.6 per cent. In 1969, 806 cases were reported, 188 cleared or 23 per cent.

SEX OFFENCES

Ten sex offences other than rape were reported in 1970, one cleared, or 10 per cent. In 1969, of the 12 cases reported, eight were cleared, or 66 per cent.

Fraud cases increased from 601 to 701. The clearing rated dropped from 52 per cent to 39 per cent.

The number of suicides rose from 13 to 15, accidental deaths went from 8 to 19.

Ask the Times

Q. Would you please explain how our lieutenant-governors are chosen and also when the present term of office expires?—AJH.

A. The lieutenant-governor is chosen by the federal cabinet. The normal term is five years and B.C. Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson was appointed in 1968.

Q. Can you tell me where Bill Wilson, the co-founder of Alcoholics Anonymous who died recently, was born? What nationality was he? A.C.

A. William G. Wilson was born in the small Vermont town of East Dorset. He was an American citizen. A Wall Street stockbroker, he was ruined by the Depression and became an alcoholic. He and a doctor, who examined him in Akron, Ohio, founded A.A. in 1935.

Q. Could you give me the addresses of the actors Alec Guinness and George C. Scott?—J.C.

A. Alec Guinness lives at Kettlebrook Meadows, Steep Marsh, Petersfield, Hampshire, England. We can find no address for George C. Scott.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IN THE YEARS WHEN A father can get away with it I used to subject my son to all manner of bilge and quack-quack on any number of subjects. One of these was male garb.

It should be decently unobtrusive, I would tell him, and even a touch conservative. No loud ties. Dark suit and black shoes after 6 p.m. And, naturally, a white shirt.

Ron would listen politely, going on with whatever he happened to be doing. Sometimes he and his mother would trade indulgent smiles.

As time passed, Ron escaped these well-intended homilies by growing up. Also, I kept running into situations that niggled at my convictions.

There was, for example, a party we went to not so long ago. My dear one splurged on a pant suit for the occasion. She looked like a million bucks. I wore a dark suit, white shirt, discreet tie and black shoes, and felt kind of stuffy.

Men's styles were changing for the better, Win observed as we drove home, and had I noticed the smartly turned-out guest in the red shirt?

Sure I'd noticed him, and even envied him a trifle.

"I'm not suggesting you copy him," Win said, "only next time you buy new clothes, it mightn't hurt to loosen up a bit."

Come to think of it, I was in line for some replacements. A sport jacket, maybe, since even the sturdiest of tweed doesn't resist time and abrasion forever. A pair of slacks. Possibly a shirt with the merest suggestion of a stripe, and a modestly wide tie of the quieter sort.

I told Ron about this decision. He grinned. "Going to shake it up a little?" he asked. "How about something daring this time, like no cuffs on the pants?"

He was wearing a striped suit of a greenish cast, a purple shirt, and a wide tie of considerable authority. It was an outfit that would once have set me squawking. But on him it looked good.

"I'll do better than that," I told him. "Come on downtown and do the picking for me. I'm in your hands."

"You're on," he said. "We can't expect miracles, but by the time Ralph and Kerry get through with you, you'll hardly know yourself."

He went off, whistling, to alert Ralph and Kerry at the store where he got the suit.

"They're expecting a new shipment in," he reported back, after a phone call punctuated by one hearty laugh and several chuckles. "We'll go down Saturday morning."

Last Saturday, that was.

I'm not clear about all the details, which came at me somewhat faster than I could absorb. But while Ron kept track from offside with critical eye, Ralph and Kerry performed their image-changing stint.

At the start I was inclined to panic. Once I asked, "Isn't that check kind of noisy?" and again. "Aren't we going overboard here?"

But nobody, including the sales lady with an eye for a tie who joined us, appeared to be listening.

At one point I distinctly heard my son say, "He only buys clothes when we prod him—I think he'd better have some more ties and another pair of pants. No cuffs."

They proceeded serenely with the task of color co-ordinating me. As a final inspiration, they fitted me with a red shirt like the one that fellow at the party wore.

Then they let me climb back into my old slacks with the sagging seat and the hint of kangaroo pouch in front, and my faithful all-weather tweed jacket which did seem to have become more than a little ratty.

I'm grateful for their efforts. Unguided, a man could stay a fuddle-duddle conservative all his life.

And tomorrow, come hell or high water, I am going to break out that red shirt!

Hydro Funding To Continue

By BRUCE YEMEN and PETER McNELLY

Premier Bennett said Tuesday that "until further notice" he will continue financing B.C. Hydro development out of government-controlled funds.

He was replying in the legislature to Liberal Leader Pat McGeer who said Bennett's refusal to send Hydro to the open money market has held back schools and hospital construction and "social betterment" in general.

Bennett said financing out of government-controlled funds such as the Canada Pension fund in the past two years of high interest rates will have saved millions of dollars over the full term of the bonds.

He said the government will save millions more in commissions and other charges by continuing to provide capital development funds for Hydro and the Pacific Great Eastern Railway from government-controlled funds.

Bennett repeated earlier statements that not a single school or hospital is being held up "for monetary purposes" and the government has "no difficulty" in meeting all its financing responsibilities.

McGeer said B.C. Hydro in a 1967 prospectus forecast that it would borrow more than $300 million on the open market in addition to more than $600 million from government-controlled sources in the 1967 to 1972 period.

As yet, said McGeer, Hydro has not borrowed a "single penny" on the open market.

If Hydro were to live up to its forecast, it would have to borrow its next $300 million on the open market, McGeer said.

Bennett said the B.C. government is the only one in the world that managed to finance all its needs on its own during the financial "crisis" in the past two years.

"We will continue until further notice to finance within our own funds," he said, adding it would save "millions and millions over a period of time."

Bennett said he couldn't understand McGeer's attitude because he calls on the one hand for the cheapest electric power to be developed yet he asks that it be financed at the most expensive interest rates on the open market.

McGeer said that if Bennett sent Hydro to the open market he would end up with $300 million to invest in job-producing capital projects of a social betterment nature.

REDUCTION

He also asked whether the premier could seek a Hydro rate reduction for elderly citizens who use minimal amounts of power but get hit with high bills.

Eileen Dailly (NDP — Burnaby North) asked for the elimination of $40 security deposits which she said Hydro requires of jobless people.

Dennis Cocke (NDP — New Westminster) said his constituents have had a harder time dealing directly with B.C. Hydro over gas bills than with the city's power system for electricity.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) asked Bennett to tell the house the priorities for the $400 million the budget indicates will be spent on crown agencies.

Bennett said the first priority is for schools and hospitals, but he did not answer Williams when asked how much money will go to Hydro, how much to the PGE and how much to other government agencies.

"I think we're entitled to have some idea how a figure like $400 million will be broken down," Williams said.

Williams also received no answer when he asked Bennett to say what the capital requirements will be for the next three years for Hydro and the PGE.

Storm Hampers Rose Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — A steady stream of witnesses passed through Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday at the trial of Paul Rose as Prosecutor Jacques Ducros tried to establish the source of eight ransom messages received last October from the kidnappers of Pierre Laporte.

The long and tedious process was hampered by the absence of a Crown prosecutor, a court clerk, a stenographer and five witnesses because of a severe snowstorm which snarled transportation in the city.

Tuesday's session of the trial was delayed until nearly 3 p.m. by the storm.

Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said he understood the circumstances which caused the delay "but I would urge the lawyers and the jurors and anyone else involved in the case to do their utmost to make sure we can proceed with some speed."

The judge reported that several members of the jury have come down with colds and he swore in Dr. Eugene Fournier, of the Quebec Provincial Police, to act as their medical adviser until the end of the trial.

The 12 jurors are being held incommunicado during the trial and are allowed to phone their homes and offices only once a day.

DEAL WITH MESSAGES

Proceedings Tuesday revolved around the ransom messages from Mr. Laporte's kidnappers.

During the week of Oct. 10-17, while the late Quebec labor minister was being held by his terrorist captors, Montreal radio stations received anonymous telephone tips that "communiques" had been planted in such places as litter boxes and telephone booths.

Before the Judge

A 56-year-old man who missed the bus to Campbell River Monday because of a bottle of rum was sentenced to seven days in jail by Judge William Ostler Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to vagrancy.

Eugene Mathe, no fixed address, was also fined $50 by Ostler Monday when he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by being drunk.

He told the judge at the time he was going to catch the bus to Campbell River.

"What stopped you from getting the bus?" Ostler asked.

"A bottle of rum," Mathe replied.

Ostler said it might have been better if he had taken the bottle on the bus with him.

Mathe was arrested, court was told, about 11:15 p.m. Monday in Centennial Square with nowhere to go, a partially-filled bottle of wine at his feet and $2.29 in his possession.

Norman F. Miller, 20, of 1323 Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a two-year probation for two counts of breaking, entering and theft.

Ostler noted that the offences were serious but added that it was the accused's first offence.

The charges involved break-ins into homes at 815 Rockheights and 813 Hutchinson Feb. 13. Items worth $120 were taken from one home and the accused was apprehended at the second home.

Robert E. Patterson, 54, of 450 Dallas, was fined $300 in traffic court by Judge Edmond St. Jorre for impaired driving.

His licence was suspended for four months.

David G. McNab, 34, of 1521 Elford, was fined $350 for impaired driving by St. Jorre and prohibited from driving for six months except on business purposes.

John Gagnier, 856 Colville, was fined $300 by St. Jorre for impaired driving and he was prohibited from driving for three months except on business purposes.

★ ★ ★

Joseph M. Shepherd, 20, of CFB Esquimalt, was fined a total of $240 in traffic court Monday by Judge Edmond St. Jorre for driving without due care and attention and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

St. Jorre banned the accused from driving for three months. He fined Shepherd $200 for the over .08 per cent offence and $40 for the no care and attention charge.

Egypt Stands Firm On Total Rollback

From AP-REUTER

The Israeli government has created three committees to draw up territorial terms and new borders it would accept in a Middle East peace agreement, informed sources report. But Egypt has told the Big Four again that peace is impossible unless Israel withdraws from all the land it captured in 1967.

Premier Golda Meir's cabinet said Sunday that Israel never would return to the boundaries existing before the 1967 war, but said it is willing to negotiate new "secure and agreed" territorial lines.

Mahmoud Riad, Egypt's foreign minister, Monday summoned the chief U.S. diplomat in Cairo and the ambassadors of Britain, France and the Soviet Union. A ministry spokesman said he told them the Israeli refusal constitutes "a challenge to the UN charter, the Big Four powers and world public opinion."

"Peace can not be established in the area without Israel's total withdrawal from the entire Arab lands occupied in June, 1967," Riad said.

DESCRIBE GROUPS

The sources in Jerusalem said one border mapping committee is headed by a senior army officer, another by key government officials and the third is made up of experts on international law. They were formed last month after Israel returned to indirect peace negotiations with Jordan and Egypt under Jarring, the sources said.

Each committee is working on a specific aspect of peacetime orders, they said.

The army group is drawing up the over-all plan using principles devised by Defence Minister Moshe Dayan that include retention of the Gaza Strip in Egypt and the Golan Heights in Syria.

They also call for Israeli troops at Sharm el Sheikh, at the foot of the Sinai Peninsula, and along a strip of the southern Sinai coast to protect Israeli shipping from the Red Sea to the port of Elath.

The committee of government ministers is working on a plan to keep Jerusalem united under Israeli rule, including the Arab sector taken from Jordan in the six-day war. Jordan would have sovereignty over Moslem shrines in the city, possibly as leased enclaves.

The third group is studying treaties and armistices.

NEW STATE PROPOSED

One suggested solution to the problem of relocation of Palestinian Arabs displaced when the United Nations set up the Jewish state in 1948 has been creation of a separate state along the River Jordan.

President Anwar Sadat indicated Egyptian policy may be changing. He told Newsweek magazine that "a reasonable way to solve the problem" would be compensation for lost land and a referendum among Palestinians on whether to be part of Jordan or to have a separate state linked with Jordan.

Syrian President Ahmed el Khatib resigned Monday and was elected by the 173-man People's Council as its Speaker.

Army Officers Locked Out By Sweden

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Swedish government announced a lockout of an estimated 3,000 officers in the armed forces Tuesday as retaliation against a decision by their unions to shut down the state railways.

Sweden has 5,300 professional officers who enjoy full strike rights.

The announcement was made at a news conference by the government's national office of collective bargaining which also said it would lock out about 1,000 officials of the forestry board, the maritime board, the road construction board and the telegraph company.

The measure will affect mostly members of the national federation of government employes of which the officers are affiliated.

The lockout, to go into effect March 4, will bring the number of striking and locked out government employes to over 50,000. The worsening conflict is the biggest since 1945 when metal and engineering workers staged a nationwide walkout.

It was believed to be the first time a government locked out members of its own armed forces in a labor conflict.

The officers, including most generals, are members of a larger labor group which shut down the state railways Feb. 5 when 600 switching system operators struck.

Supreme commander Gen. Stig Synnergren criticized the government's decision and said it would put the armed forces prestige in jeopardy both at home and abroad.

He said "our preparedness against attack will suffer" because some 30,000 conscripts, serving their one-year compulsory military service, will be sent home.

Pollution Control Operating

VANCOUVER (CP)—MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced completion and start-up Tuesday of a $3.5 million water pollution control installation at its pulp and paper plant in Port Alberni.

A company spokesman estimated a total of $10 million has been spent on various anti-pollution systems at the mill since it was built in 1948. A $1 million electrostatic precipitator was recently completed there.

The latest control unit includes a 200-foot diameter clarifier and a 30-acre aeration lagoon which treats 20 million gallons of waste water from the mill every day.

MacMillan Bloedel said the system provides both primary and secondary treatment of the mill effluent and that it is the first installation of its kind at a pulp and paper mill in the B.C. coastal region.

The company said that because its Port Alberni mill is situated at the head of a long ocean inlet and besides an important salmon river, there is a difficult effluent control problem.

Czechs Free American

AMSTERDAM (AP) — A young American was freed from a Czechoslovak prison today after serving seven months of a four-year sentence. He was expelled from the Communist country and flown to Amsterdam en route to the United States.

Fred H. Eidlin, 28, of Rochester, N.Y., refused to discuss his trial on a charge of subversion or his time in jail.

Eidlin was a student of East European affairs at the University of Toronto.

"First I want to collect my thoughts," he said, "and see all the implications of this case. This is a delicate matter. I have been isolated for several months."

Eidlin was arrested last July in Prague, and a court there convicted him Dec. 18, ruling that his employment in 1968-69 by Radio Free Europe in West Germany was a subversive act against Czechoslovakia. He said he was told at 8 a.m. today he was being freed.

Scouts Plan Expeditions

Three rugged expeditions are planned this summer by senior scouts from the Greater Victoria area.

Twelve seniors will attempt a nine-day hike through wild terrain along the original Hudson's Bay trail of 1849, from Lodestone Lake near Tulameen to Hope. The 85-mile trek will start July 31.

Scout Executive Jack Scrivener said the trail has not been used for 100 years.

A 100-mile horseback ride also is planned for July, starting at Gold Bridge, 70 miles northwest of Lillooet.

A third crew will hike the West Coast trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield searching for caves containing Spanish treasure.

Mediation Talks At Pulp Operation Extended a Week

VANCOUVER (CP) — The term of mediator Gus Leonidas in the contract dispute of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada at Gold River has been extended to March 4.

Mediation talks, involving the union's additional demands to the industry master contract negotiated last year, continued here Tuesday.

About 380 men at the Tahsis Co. Gold River operation are seeking special classification and pay-rate adjustments.

Princess In Accident

LONDON (AP) — A car driven by Princess Anne collided with another in London today, Buckingham Palace reported.

A palace spokesman said that no one in either car was injured and that the automobiles continued on their way after police "attended to the usual formalities." Damage was said to have been slight.

The princess was driving a Reliant Scimitar sports car given her by her family for Christmas.

The palace said the car in front of Anne braked suddenly and the princess' car struck the rear.

Pancake-Flipping Kansan Wins Despite Icy Course

LIBERAL, Kan. (UPI) — Mrs. Barbara Rinehart, wife of an oilfield worker, bounded down the icy brick streets of Liberal Tuesday in 67.7 seconds to win the annual Shrove Tuesday international pancake race against the women of Olney, England.

Ruth Faulkner, a 19-year-old physical education student, earlier had won the Olney leg on the s-shaped, 415-yard course in 68 seconds.

Mrs. Rinehart's victory evened the series between the two towns at 11 wins each and represented Liberal's second victory in as many years.

The 24-year-old Mrs. Rinehart battled a treacherous ice-covered course following Monday's blizzard which swept through this Kansas prairie town. Snow plows had worked through the night to clear the streets.

Miss Faulkner, who stands nearly 5 ft., 10 inches and weighs 150 pounds, sprinted from the market square to the church of St. Peter and St. Paul five yards ahead of the rest of the field of 16 pancake tossers.

She was given the traditional kiss of victory by 15-year-old Andrew Soul, one of the choirboys. He eagerly repeated the kiss six times for the benefit of photographers.

Miss Faulkner is a student of physical education at Teachers Training College and failed to finish the race in her first try two years ago. This time, she tossed her pancake the required three times shortly after the start and was then able to concentrate on running.

"My legs are like jelly," said Miss Faulkner, puffing. "I am going to give up smoking."

"I think I won because I went over the course last night and I took it easy around the shape bends instead of what I did two years ago," she said.

Miss Faulkner and most of the other contestants wore miniskirts beneath the required apron and kerchief on their heads.

Gladys Dillingham, in her 70s, gallantly finished last. She has taken part in 16 of the races.

"Now we have to see what they do out at Liberal," said the Rev. Ronald Collins who revived the race, a custom believed to have originated in 1445.

The modern competition at Olney began in 1947 and was expanded to compete with Liberal in 1950.

In Brampton, Ont., despite weather conditions that nearly turned the affair into a flop, about a dozen women turned out for the city's first annual Shrove Tuesday pancake race Tuesday.

It took 18-year-old Marlie Abel, of Brampton, 121 seconds to run the 415-yard course, flipping her pancake all the way.

For her effort she won $250 to award to the charity of her choice, and a silver tray for herself.

FLIPPERS RUN THROUGH RAIN

GANGES — Pancake flippers raced through rain and cold winds in the annual Shrove Tuesday pancake races here.

Dennis Beech, representing Island Garage, won the Perpetual Frying Pan in the international event. Jim Merston of Bank of Montreal was second, and Dave Roberts of B.C. Ferries third.

Beech also won the men's open, followed by Mal Plann and David Roberts.

Ruth Archer won the women's open, Carol Kaye was second and Linda Simpson third.

Kathleen Rathwell won the grandmothers' event, followed by Ellen Miller. Walter Brigden, the only grandfather to enter, was declared winner.

In the opening event, kindergarten winners were Ardith Darby, Jody Harrocks and Patricia Westcott.

Convener Vicki Griffin said she was considering postponing the event because of the weather until the enthusiastic children, 50 strong, showed up as competitors and spectators.

Prizes included Centennial dollars, candy bars — and packages of pancake mix.

BABY BONUS LIMIT HIKED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not act on a white paper proposal that family allowances be eliminated for families earning more than $10,000 a year, Welfare Minister John Munro said today.

He said in a Commons reply to Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) that this proposal in the white paper on income security would result in certain injustices and that the government now is considering alternatives.

He did not say what these alternatives are but added in a reply to Lorne Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) that there will have to be some income point where family allowances are cut off.

Major Banks Reduce Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's major banks cut their basic interest rates today following a federal government signal designed to stimulate business activity and employment.

In general, the moves brought the level of interest rates about two per cent lower than they were at the start of 1970 when the government was in the midst of a tight-money period in an effort to control inflation.

The Bank of Canada signalled the latest cut when it announced Tuesday night that the bank rate was being cut to 5¼ per cent from 5¾ per cent, effective today. It was the second reduction in less than two weeks and the lowest for the rate since the autumn of 1967.

The chartered banks reacted by cutting their prime rate on loans to 6½ per cent from seven per cent, effective Monday, March 1. At the start of 1970 the prime rate was 8½ per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal all announced similar cuts.

CONSIDERS CUT

The Toronto Dominion Bank, which earlier cut its rate to 6¾ per cent from seven per cent effective Monday, Feb. 22, was considering a possible further reduction.

General mortgage rates also were expected to drift lower in the next few weeks. The Royal Bank in its announcement today cut one-half of one per cent off mortgage rates, lowering them to 8¾ per cent for National Housing Act mortgages and to 9¼ per cent for conventional mortgages.

The bank rate doesn't affect individuals directly since it is the rate the central bank charges on infrequent loans to the chartered banks.

But it is a signal of federal government policy and reductions indicate efforts to pump more money into the economy —generally referred to as easy money.

The prime rate is the rate the chartered banks charge to their best customers for low-risk loans but is more important since it is the basis on which all interest rates generally are based.

INTEREST CHOPPED

Today's announcements were accompanied in most cases by reductions of one-half per cent in the interest the banks pay on some types of savings accounts.

J. Leonard Walker, president of the Bank of Montreal, said the lower rates should be of major importance in reducing the inflow of short-term funds from abroad.

"This should ease some of the upward pressure that has recently pushed the Canadian dollar almost to par with the United States dollar."

Snow Stopping

MONTREAL (CP) — Clearing skies and light flurries today promised Montrealers respite from their third severe snowstorm in two weeks.

MANITOBA MINISTER RESIGNS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Highways Minister Joe Borowski said today he has offered his resignation to the Manitoba government and left it to the cabinet to decide whether to accept it.

The minister left a continuing cabinet meeting and in a brief comment to reporters indicated he would not apologize for reported remarks about the working habits of Indians and about a disabled war veteran working as a security guard at the legislature building.

"If I apologized I would be pleading guilty to being a racist," said the 37-year-old minister.

Dockyards Reject Offer

Federal government dockyard workers in Halifax and in Esquimalt have rejected a pay offer from the treasury board.

Workers in Halifax voted 83 per cent against and Esquimalt workers were 84.7 per cent against, producing a combined opposition of 95 per cent.

Tom Graham, west coast president of the Federal Government Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, comprised of affiliated unions, said today Esquimalt men were offered an increase of 42 cents an hour compared with 27 cents for Halifax.

SUPPORT EAST

Rejection "means the workers out here have almost unanimously supported the people in the east. We have listened to people in high places talk about the problems of regional disparity. Now we are giving them a chance to do something about it."

He said talks have been marked by "a complete lack of negotiation on the part of the treasury board."

Halifax naval dockyard workers have announced plans for a strike vote next week in an effort to get the same increase as offered the Esquimalt men.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said Tuesday that "under no circumstances" should Halifax dockyard workers get a smaller raise than those at Esquimalt.

East coast union spokesman Bernard Dixon said the Halifax workers "are getting shafted" in the offers, which would give them an hourly base rate of $3.58 or $1 an hour less than Esquimalt.

Hanoi Sees New Threat

Laos Push Alarms N. Viets

Times News Services

SAIGON — While U.S. planes continued the bombing of North Vietnam today, a Hanoi military leader was quoted as saying that recent moves by the United States in Indochina had placed the security of his country in great danger.

The North Vietnam news agency reported that Defence Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap told a Soviet embassy reception in Hanoi Tuesday night that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had launched a large-scale invasion of southern Laos in coordination with Laotian government and Thai forces.

"In massing such a big force just south of the 17th parallel, the U.S. also plots against the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam," he said.

NO LIMIT

Moreover, President Nixon had declared that he would not put any limit on the use of U.S. power, especially air power, in any part of Indochina, Giap noted.

"This is a new very serious step taken by the U.S. imperialists to escalate their war in violation of the sovereignty and neutrality of the kingdom of Laos, to the great danger of the security of the DRVN."

The latest U.S. raids on the North were a follow up to 50 strikes along the Laotian border in North Vietnamese territory during the weekend.

Tuesday night and early today, two F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers fired three air-to-ground missiles southeast of the Ben Karai pass in North Vietnam, near an infiltration route from the North. A third plane attacked radar-controlled anti-aircraft sites in the area.

TAX CHANGE DELAYED . . . BUT ONLY BRIEFLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Government sources say that Finance Minister Edgar Benson's definitive proposals for revision of federal tax law will not be introduced in the Commons before May.

This represents a months' delay from the schedule the government had a few weeks ago. It was then stated the tax-law changes could not be introduced before the end of March, but might come in April or May.

The plan will be introduced in the Commons with a budget speech, triggering a six-day general debate before the tax law amending bill itself is introduced formally.

Teamsters Claim 37 Pacts Signed

The Teamsters Union said this morning it has signed new agreements with 37 companies in the general trucking and warehouse industry in British Columbia.

The agreements contain the struck goods clause which has been the stumbling block between the union and the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for more than 70 companies, most of which have not signed new agreements.

Blair Whitelock, head of the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 31 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said the companies which have signed new agreements handle 40 per cent of the highway freight business.

The legislature, meanwhile, did not debate Tuesday a government notice of motion which would order an end to the strike-lockout which began Friday.

DETAILS LACKING

Labor Minister and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who gave the notice of motion, would give no explanation of why it was not put to the legislature Tuesday.

Carl Anshelm, chief negotiator for the companies, met Peterson Tuesday but would give no details. He said he is disappointed the government has not intervened.

Whitelock said the extent of the new agreements signed with 37 companies would make the legislature's debate "an exercise in nothing because the public is not being inconvenienced."

He said Peterson was "just flying a kite when he said that the public is being inconvenienced by this dispute. The public cannot be inconvenienced unless the dispute goes on for some time."

CROSSED LINES

The struck goods clause allows Teamsters to refuse to operate equipment brought through picket lines by supervisors or others. The union already had a clause allowing union members not to cross picket lines.

During the 1969 oil refineries strike, however, while Teamsters refused to cross picket lines, supervisors took tanker-trucks in and out and turned them over to Teamsters for delivery.

Senator Ed Lawson, head of the Teamsters Union in Canada, said the union doesn't want to be "legal strikebreakers."

In Victoria, two of the three member companies of the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association — Johnston Terminals and Capital Freightways—have closed down but a third, Dowell's

Maritime Defence Group Threatened by Arms Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — Withdrawal of Nigeria from the eight-nation Commonwealth committee on maritime defence in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans likely will scuttle the committee before it can even meet, informed sources here said today.

Canada is a member of the committee, established at last month's Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore as a delaying tactic on the issue of British arms for South Africa.

The tactic worked for only one month and while Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, was still trying to arrange the committee's first meeting, Britain announced earlier this week it will sell military helicopters to South Africa.

Mr. Smith is in Ottawa for a meeting late today with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. He was to leave immediately after the meeting for London.

Nigeria is one of two African members on the committee. The other is Kenya.

INDIA MAY FOLLOW

India has indicated it is likely to withdraw from the committee following the Nigerian move.

The British decision has made it "very difficult for any of us to continue in the study group or to have anything to do with it," highly placed sources said.

The Indian foreign ministry warned in a statement last Monday that any British decision to sell arms to South Africa before the study group completed its work would have "serious implications for the very existence of the Commonwealth."

The main African opponent at Singapore to British sale of armaments to South Africa was not Nigeria.

The most criticism came from Zambia and Tanzania, which are not members of the committee.

$1,350,000 PAID FOR GIRL'S LOSS

LAURA

NEW YORK (AP) — A Long Island girl who lost her arms after she touched an electrical transformer in May, 1968, will receive $1,350,000 in what her lawyer called the largest such out-of-court settlement in the United States.

The girl, Laura Falconer of Centereach, N.Y., was three years old at the time of the accident. While playing in a lot near her home she touched the transformer, which had been placed there by the Long Island Lighting Co. Her arms were severely burned and subsequently amputated.

The device had been put in the lot to serve a housing development, but the development never was built. The transformer was in a locked steel box, but someone had broken the lock.

Nixon Slaps Curbs On Construction Pay

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon has given management and labor a clear indication of his toughening stand against inflation by imposing wage controls on government-sponsored construction work.

The White House announced Tuesday Nixon suspended indefinitely the Davis-Bacon Act of 1931 which controls wages paid on building jobs financed by Washington. Officials estimate that these amount to about one-third of the $90,000 million in construction projects at present under way in the United States.

Labor's immediate reaction was hostile, and construction industry chiefs said the president's action would be ineffective and inadequate.

But Nixon appeared to have backed away from a direct showdown with either group by ruling out a politically-volatile general freeze on wages and prices throughout the industry.

Instead, he suspended the legislation under which men employed on government construction work are paid at the prevailing local wage rate, which usually means the highest scale for private projects.

FLEEING MEN GET SINKING FEELING

STAFFORD, England (Reuter) — Two men carrying suitcases full of stolen property had a sinking feeling as they raced across a snow-covered lawn.

What they thought was the lawn was an ice-covered swimming pool.

The men whom police helped to dry off Tuesday after they got out of the pool, Barry Halstead, 25, and William Mansfield, 23, each were sentenced to 18 months for burglary in this central England town.

Peter Wilson, 24, who was waiting for them in a getaway car, also got 18 months.

WALLACE ON DOCTOR HASSLE:

Loffmark Must Speak for Himself

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark — not the Social Credit party — must clarify whether he lied to the legislature, Socred backbencher Dr. Scott Wallace said today.

The Oak Bay MLA said in an interview today he was sad to see Premier Bennett had made the Loffmark controversy a party issue Tuesday when he announced the minister has his personal backing.

"The responsibility rests directly on the shoulders of one man to clarify the situation, and not on the party as a whole," Wallace said.

He said he would not say whether he thought Loffmark had lied to the legislature. But if the health minister has lied, as the Liberals have suggested, he has no choice but to resign, Wallace said.

'I still retain the hope that the minister will make a statement. I don't think that any institution can persist in any real way if the honor of any member is left in doubt."

WALLACE
. . . matter of principle

In the house Tuesday Bennett said that in the parliamentary system cabinet ministers are "on the recommendation of the premier."

"I want to say the minister of health services has the complete confidence of the premier of B.C."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said allegations against Loffmark are serious enough to warrant a "committee of privilege" to study the issue.

Macdonald said Bennett's reply is "strictly a partisan answer . . . That's a 38-17 answer and it's not good enough."

The government has 38 seats and the opposition, 17.

Loffmark was accused of filing an untrue statement in the legislature after he took issue with charges that he had threatened to look into the medical qualifications of a Clearwater doctor who was campaigning vigorously for a hospital.

Hanoi Security 'In Danger'

Major Banks Reduce Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's major banks cut their basic interest rates today following a federal government signal designed to stimulate business activity and employment.

In general, the moves brought the level of interest rates about two per cent lower than they were at the start of 1970 when the government was in the midst of a tight-money period in an effort to control inflation.

The Bank of Canada signalled the latest cut when it announced Tuesday night that the bank rate was being cut to 5¾ per cent from 5¾ per cent, effective today. It was the second reduction in less than two weeks and the lowest for the rate since the autumn of 1967.

The chartered banks reacted by cutting their prime rate on loans to 6½ per cent from seven per cent, effective Monday, March 1. At the start of 1970 the prime rate was 8½ per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank and the Bank of Montreal all announced similar cuts.

CONSIDERS CUT

The Toronto Dominion Bank, which earlier cut its rate to 6¾ per cent from seven per cent effective Monday, Feb. 22, was considering a possible further reduction.

General mortgage rates also were expected to drift lower in the next few weeks. The Royal Bank in its announcement today cut one-half of one per cent off mortgage rates, lowering them to 8¾ per cent for National Housing Act mortgages and to 9¼ per cent for conventional mortgages.

The bank rate doesn't affect individuals directly since it is the rate the central bank charges on infrequent loans to the chartered banks.

But it is a signal of federal government policy and reductions indicate efforts to pump more money into the economy —generally referred to as easy money.

The prime rate is the rate the chartered banks charge to their best customers for low-risk loans but is more important since it is the basis on which all interest rates generally are based.

INTEREST CHOPPED

Today's announcements were accompanied in most cases by reductions of one-half per cent in the interest the banks pay on some types of savings accounts.

J. Leonard Walker, president of the Bank of Montreal, said the lower rates should be of major importance in reducing the inflow of short-term funds from abroad.

MANITOBA MINISTER RESIGNS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Highways Minister Joe Borowski said today he has offered his resignation to the Manitoba government and left it to the cabinet to decide whether to accept it.

The minister left a continuing cabinet meeting and in a brief comment to reporters indicated he would not apologize for reported remarks about the working habits of Indians and about a disabled war veteran working as a security guard at the legislature building.

"If I apologized I would be pleading guilty to being a racist," said the 37-year-old minister.

Dockyards Reject Offer

Federal government dockyard workers in Halifax and in Esquimalt have rejected a pay offer from the treasury board.

Workers in Halifax voted 83 per cent against and Esquimalt workers were 84.7 per cent against, producing a combined opposition of 95 per cent.

Tom Graham, west coast president of the Federal Government Dockyard Trades and Labor Council, comprised of affiliated unions, said today Esquimalt men were offered an increase of 42 cents an hour compared with 27 cents for Halifax.

SUPPORT EAST

Rejection "means the workers out here have almost unanimously supported the people in the east. We have listened to people in high places talk about the problems of regional disparity. Now we are giving them a chance to do something about it."

He said talks have been marked by "a complete lack of negotiation on the part of the treasury board."

Halifax naval dockyard workers have announced plans for a strike vote next week in an effort to get the same increase as offered the Esquimalt men.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said Tuesday that "under no circumstances" should Halifax dockyard workers get a smaller raise than those at Esquimalt.

East coast union spokesman Bernard Dixon said the Halifax workers "are getting shafted" in the offers, which would give them an hourly base rate of $3.58 or $1 an hour less than Esquimalt.

Maritime Defence Group Threatened by Arms Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — Withdrawal of Nigeria from the eight-nation Commonwealth committee on maritime defence in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans likely will scuttle the committee before it can even meet, informed sources here said today.

Canada is a member of the committee, established at last month's Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore as a delaying tactic on the issue of British arms for South Africa.

The tactic worked for only one month and while Arnold Smith of Canada, Commonwealth secretary-general, was still trying to arrange the committee's first meeting, Britain announced earlier this week it will sell military helicopters to South Africa.

Mr. Smith is in Ottawa for a meeting late today with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. He was to leave immediately after the meeting for London.

Nigeria is one of two African members on the committee. The other is Kenya.

INDIA MAY FOLLOW

India has indicated it is likely to withdraw from the committee following the Nigerian move.

The British decision has made it "very difficult for any of us to continue in the study group or to have anything to do with it," highly placed sources said.

The Indian foreign ministry warned in a statement last Monday that any British decision to sell arms to South Africa before the study group completed its work would have "serious implications for the very existence of the Commonwealth."

The main African opponent at Singapore to British sale of armaments to South Africa was not Nigeria.

The most criticism came from Zambia and Tanzania, which are not members of the committee.

$1,350,000 PAID FOR GIRL'S LOSS

LAURA

NEW YORK (AP) — A Long Island girl who lost her arms after she touched an electrical transformer in May, 1968, will receive $1,350,000 in what her lawyer called the largest such out-of-court settlement in the United States.

The girl, Laura Falconer of Centereach, N.Y., was three years old at the time of the accident. While playing in a lot near her home she touched the transformer, which had been placed there by the Long Island Lighting Co. Her arms were severely burned and subsequently amputated.

The device had been put in the lot to serve a housing development, but the development never was built. The transformer was in a locked steel box, but someone had broken the lock.

U.S. Jets Continue Bombings

Times News Services

SAIGON — While U.S. planes continued the bombing of North Vietnam today, a Hanoi military leader was quoted as saying that recent moves by the United States in Indochina had placed the security of his country in great danger.

The North Vietnam news agency reported that Defence Minister Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap told a Soviet embassy reception in Hanoi Tuesday night that U.S. and South Vietnamese troops had launched a large-scale invasion of southern Laos in co-ordination with Laotian government and Thai forces.

"In massing such a big force just south of the 17th parallel, the U.S. also plots against the Democratic Republic of North Vietnam," he said.

NO LIMIT

Moreover, President Nixon had declared that he would not put any limit on the use of U.S. power, especially air power, in any part of Indochina, Giap noted.

"This is a new very serious step taken by the U.S. imperialists to escalate their war in violation of the sovereignty and neutrality of the kingdom of Laos, to the great danger of the security of the DRVN."

The latest U.S. raids on the North were a follow up to 50 strikes along the Laotian border in North Vietnamese territory during the weekend.

Tuesday night and early today, two F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers fired three air-to-ground missiles southeast of the Ben Karai pass in North Vietnam, near an infiltration route from the North. A third plane attacked radar-controlled anti-aircraft sites in the area.

BILL 33 DEBATE ON TRUCKERS OPENS

The legislature this afternoon began debate on the government's resolution, under Bill 33, ordering an end to the Teamsters' strike.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson opened the debate after a 20-minute procedural debate in which New Democrats and Liberals argued the government was breaking parliamentary rules in calling the motion today.

Teamsters Claim 37 Pacts Signed

The Teamsters Union said this morning it has signed new agreements with 37 companies in the general trucking and warehouse industry in British Columbia.

The agreements contain the struck goods clause which has been the stumbling block between the union and the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for more than 70 companies, most of which have not signed new agreements.

Blair Whitelock, head of the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 31 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said the companies which have signed new agreements handle 40 per cent of the highway freight business.

The legislature, meanwhile, did not debate Tuesday a government notice of motion which would order an end to the strike-lockout which began Friday.

DETAILS LACKING

Labor Minister and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, who gave the notice of motion, would give no explanation of why it was not put to the legislature Tuesday.

Carl Ansheim, chief negotiator for the companies, met Peterson Tuesday but would give no details. He said he is disappointed the government has not intervened.

Whitelock said the extent of the new agreements signed with 37 companies would make the legislature's debate "an exercise in nothing because the public is not being inconvenienced."

He said Peterson was "just flying a kite when he said that the public is being inconvenienced by this dispute. The public cannot be inconvenienced unless the dispute goes on for some time."

CROSSED LINES

The struck goods clause allows Teamsters to refuse to operate equipment brought through picket lines by supervisors or others. The union already had a clause allowing union members not to cross picket lines.

During the 1969 oil refineries strike, however, while Teamsters refused to cross picket lines, supervisors took tanker-trucks in and out and turned them over to Teamsters for delivery.

Senator Ed Lawson, head of the Teamsters Union in Canada, said the union doesn't want to be "legal strikebreakers."

In Victoria, two of the three member companies of the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association — Johnston Terminals and Capital Freightways—have closed down but a third, Dowell's

HALIFAX — The British Columbia rink skipped by Gordie Moore of Victoria today won its fifth straight game in the Canadian Seniors Curling championships, and moved into undisputed possession of first place.

The B.C. rink defeated Nova Scotia 12-2, and is undefeated.

Meanwhile, Alberta and Quebec, which were tied with B.C. at the start of the day's play, both lost. Northern Ontario defeated Alberta 14-8, and Prince Edward Island defeated Quebec 10-7.

They are tied for second place with 4-1 marks. In other games, Ontario defeated Newfoundland 9-4, and Manitoba defeated New Brunswick 10-9.

BABY BONUS LIMIT HIKED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not act on a white paper proposal that family allowances be eliminated for families earning more than $10,000 a year, Welfare Minister John Munro said today.

He said in a Commons reply to Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) that this proposal in the white paper on income security would result in certain injustices and that the government now is considering alternatives.

WALLACE ON DOCTOR HASSLE:

Loffmark Must Speak for Himself

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark — not the Social Credit party — must clarify whether he lied to the legislature, Socred backbencher Dr. Scott Wallace said today.

The Oak Bay MLA said in an interview today he was sad to see Premier Bennett had made the Loffmark controversy a party issue Tuesday when he announced the minister has his personal backing.

"The responsibility rests directly on the shoulders of one man to clarify the situation, and not on the party as a whole," Wallace said.

He said he would not say whether he thought Loffmark had lied to the legislature. But if the health minister has lied, as the Liberals have suggested, he has no choice but to resign, Wallace said.

"I still retain the hope that the minister will make a statement. I don't think that any institution can persist in any real way if the honor of any member is left in doubt."

WALLACE
. . . matter of principle

In the house Tuesday Bennett said that in the parliamentary system cabinet ministers are "on the recommendation of the premier."

"I want to say the minister of health services has the complete confidence of the premier of B.C."

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said allegations against Loffmark are serious enough to warrant a "committee of privilege" to study the issue.

Macdonald said Bennett's reply is "strictly a partisan answer . . . That's a 38-17 answer and it's not good enough."

The government has 38 seats and the opposition, 17.

Loffmark was accused of filing an untrue statement in the legislature after he took issue with charges that he had threatened to look into the medical qualifications of a Clearwater doctor who was campaigning vigorously for a hospital.
